At 9 o'clock the General's pulse was up to the point of 165 beats a minute, FOREIGN. and was fluttering. After his raily, and about 9 o'clock, General Grant sank into a sleep that was described by witnesses as being as peaceful and beautiful as the sleep of a child. This condition, however, is not one to command confidence, for the pulse beats are still rapidly fluttering, and the res-piration which normally is 14 to the minute is now 44. At 10.30 o'clock, however, it was stated by reliable authority that the General was in a slightly oetter condi-tion than two hours ago and quieter, but as against any hopeful reference that might be drawn from this fact is the other fact that from his present pulse and respiration had not changed.

The patient's mind was yet clear and comprehensive of events and utter-ances about him. Between 10 and 11 o'clock Dr. Shrady had accosted the General and he suswered in a husky voice and promptly. Schnulants were being used but sparingly and there was an opinion expressed by the medi-cal authority about 11 o'clock that the closing crisis may occur either at one or four o'clock to-night. At midnight the General remains quiet, though not asleep. The coming hour is being anticipated with great anxiety. Bottles of not water may been placed at the General's feet to induce warmth, and mustard draughts have been applied to the stomach and breast to preserve the flagging circula-tion. Dr. Sands is resting at the hotel, and Doctors Douglas and Shrady are at the cottage. 1 a. m.-The General remains in the Captain Bushnell replies, saying; "There is no such issue. Many Re-publicans favor prohibition and many oppose it.
