SALT LAKERS IN GOTHAM.

Special Correspondence.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Salt Lake's talented young authors, Edythe Ellerbeck, is making good headway among publishers of magazine literature. Ainsley's took her up first and now Munsey has accepted one of her western stories; the editor writes, asking her for a personal interview, all of which goes to prove that Miss Ellerbeck's star is slowly but surely rising in this great eastern firmament. Her ability as a coming writer of promise is unquestionable, and that she should so soon be recognized in a city of such magnitude as this, will be a pleasurable surprise to her many friends in the west; not only can she give interesting descriptions of life beyond the Rockies, and is capable of showing the social side as well as the rough view of mining life, but her scenes and plots are drawn from observation of incidents, which have come under personal notice, she having given much thought to this phase of western life. It is not improbable that one of her stories may be set to the music of a Utah artist's illustrations, which will create double interest in the work, not only at home, but here, where the artist in question is already gaining name and fame. But Miss Ellerbeck is not devoting all her time to magazine writing. Incidentally she is hard at work with her social studies under Miss Emma Thursby, who is greatly interested in her.

Miss Thursby, by the way, never tires of talking of "dear Prof. Stephens" and the "Tabernacle choir." She declares her trip to Salt Lake was one of the most enjoyable in her long artistic career, and it is pleasant to hear her recall so many delightful reminiscences of her concert tour to the coast, and of her Salt Lake engagement.

Elders George P. Evans and V. V. Phillips, two Salt Lake boys, who have filled honorable missions to England, arrived in New York December 23, remaining a few days to visit friends and do a small amount of sight-seeing. Mr. Evans is one of the Salt Lake Theater veterans, James Evans, whose hair has whitened in the service, and whose experiences as leading man behind the flies and drop curtain, would make interesting reading. His son visited some friends of by-gone days, in response to his father's wish, Jas. T. Ferguson (W. T. Harris), Mrs. Adams, and lesser lights of those old days, making his stay in the city a pleasant one.

Anthony R. Ivins of Mexico, but at present a law student of Ann Arbor, made a flying trip across half the continent to spend the holidays with friends in New York. Mr. Ivins is the guest of his aunt, Mrs. Lamoreaux, but will visit with President McQuarrie and family, and renew acquaintance with some of the young people who are studying in and around the city.

Like a flash, and a brilliant one, Mrs. Hal Russell (Ada Dwyer) appeared on Broadway for a single performance with the "Merely Mary Ann" company, which arrived Wednesday, Dec. 21. The New Amsterdam on West Forty-first street, was a house of roses for the welcome home to another American star—Eleanor Robson—Miss Dwyer coming in for a big share of the welcome also. She was only visible to friends for a moment—so much was to be done before starting Saturday for St. Louis to begin the season's tour. She had time to say the trip abroad had been one of immense success artistically and financially for the management and each member of the company.

At Lew Field's home of fun and high class entertainment, West Forty-second street, "It Happened in Nordland" has a big cast for this place, and among its prominent members may be found the name of Miss Rosemary Gleez. Miss Gleez is doing fine work in her sketch, and has received many good notices since she appeared again on Broadway.

Sunday's service at the Latter-day Saints' chapel partook largely of the nature of a song recital with some good and stirring speeches thrown in, all in keeping with the most honored and joyous day. Flowers were furnished by the Misses Taylor of Salt Lake, and music by our quartet, Elder Kennard and Lamoreaux and Mesdames Thomas and Taylor. Miss Irene Strang of Ogden sang Gounod's "Ave Maria" with me, accompanied by Miss Pett on the piano. Miss Strang has a powerful dramatic voice, and will soon begin lessons for the development of her gift. The day was perfect, a heavy snow fall had given the earth an ideal touch, the chimneys from the many church towers, the music furnished by our home talent, and the air of good feeling manifested, made the day one long to be remembered.

The news of Prof. Heber Goddard's death has been a severe blow to his many friends and admirers here, and has added another grief to the recent loss of two of the Utah colony. Prof. Goddard studied here for some time; with him were associated Mrs. Viola Pratt Gillett, and others who have made names for themselves, and those interested in music here, have always felt they had a claim on him. Every sympathy is expressed for his wife, his son and his mother, and sincere regret that his devoted wife was not with him during his last hours. Heartfelt condolences are extended to his loved ones from all the Utah colony. JANET.

HAIL THE NEW YEAR BY DUNCAN MACRAE

1. Speed the old and hail the new,
While the stars their paths pursue,
While the mighty wheel of time
Sweeps around its course sublime,
While the earth goes rolling on
Through the shadow to the dawn!

2. Day to day and year to year
We appear and disappear.
Century to century
Goes the way of destiny
Silently fate's shuttles fly.
Everything is born to die.

3. In the miracle of change
Ever something new and strange
Rises from the depths profound
As the aeons cycle round.
Infinite variety
From the loom of Time we see
As the ages onward flee.

4. Out of life and into death
Is the passage of a breath.
Is a transient gleam of light
Swallowed in the coming night.
Children of the elements,
We are only incidents
In the circle of events.

5. Yet in the stupendous scheme
Of God's everlasting dream
We are portions, and can rest,
Trusting all is for the best.
We can cast our horoscope
By the golden stars of hope,
Where the gates eternal ope.

6. Like the old year that has gone,
Like the new year now in dawn,
So we pass from this estate
To a brighter one in wait.
We can cry when time is through,
With eternity in view,
Speed the old and hail the new.
