THE LIVER AND ITS FUNCTIONS.

It has become a well established fact that the liver is the largest and most important organ of the human system, and that its functions are of the highest importance.
It is the seat of the digestive process, and it is by its action that the food is broken up and its elements absorbed.
It is also the seat of the excretory process, and it is by its action that the waste products of the body are eliminated.
It is, therefore, of the highest importance that the liver should be kept in good health, and that its functions should be properly performed.

THRILLING ADVENTURE WITH A SHARK.

Alfeto, a Spanish diver, met with a remarkable adventure and had a very narrow escape recently while engaged in diving operations on the coast of North Carolina, near the little town of Morehead, on the Atlantic coast.

The best known coasting vessels in these parts are engaged in a small trade between the coast and the interior. The owners of the craft contracted with a diving company to have their boats raised and to recover as much of their cargo as was still serviceable. Alfeto and another diver were engaged to do the work. They made several successful descents, but on the fourth trip the Spanish diver with the adventurous spirit of his countrymen, considered it his duty to descend and signaled hastily to be drawn up, and when he had been hauled to the boat he related how Alfeto had been seized by a monster white shark and carried off.

Alfeto, who was a very brave and skillful diver, had been sent to the bottom of the sea to recover the cargo of a small schooner which had been sunk. He had been diving for some time, and had recovered a large amount of the cargo, when he was suddenly seized by a monster white shark and carried off.
