SALT LAKE CITY, AUGUST 15, 1900.

WILL BE A GREAT DISPLAY.

Already enough entries have been listed for the State Fair to make certain the fact that the display in this city next October will be highly gratifying as the best the State has seen, and as such will be a beneficial center of attraction for the public, who will be gathered at that time from all parts of the Intermountain region.

In connection with this event, the directors are a unit in placing the admission fee at a minimum. Certain expenses must be met, and certain regulations provided for, to put things in good shape. But it is no money-making scheme, so the charge will not have money-making in view. It is the intention to place the exhibition within the reach of every one who desires to see it, that it shall be truly a popular educator. And as an exhibition of Utah products it will be an entertaining sight worth much more than the entrance fee.

Those intending exhibitors who have not yet given notice of their purpose and the space desired, will have to be on the "hurry-up" list soon. Of course the exhibition building is a large structure, and will accommodate a vast number of exhibits, and the grounds are sufficiently extensive for all purposes.
But there must be some time for arrangement, and the space in the interior of the building is being taken up rapidly, although locations are not yet assigned. The probability is that there will be no room to spare, and that some of the later entries will have to take a place outside, perhaps under temporary shelter. The outdoor exhibits, too, need to be in time to be arranged in suitable order, that all may have an equal show, and not be dumped in as a last emergency, to the disadvantage of their owners. There is only six weeks left for all the arrangements, hence the necessity for exhibitors giving early notice of their desires.

As remarked heretofore by the "News," every producer in the State who is able to do so ought to be represented. The entries thus far show some branches of industry quite fully, but there are some manufacturing lines in which there might be a more complete display. Home manufacturers should not be dilatory in this regard, to their own injury. It is good business policy to show the people the State's manufacturing productions.

In the live stock department, where the entries are very numerous, there has been some complaint because the law allows the directors to offer premiums only to State productions. This is for the prizes to be paid for with State money. There probably should be some modification of, or addition to the State law in this regard, and the matter might be brought to the attention of the Legislature. Certainly the lawmakers had in mind that the State funds should not be carried off by outside exhibitors and products; so there is a good side to the proposition. This is especially the case in view of the fact that by special premiums the directors have provided for the exhibition of animals reared outside the State but owned by persons inside. The same arrangement is made in other divisions of the Fair, therefore no cause exists for grievous complaint, so far as this State Fair is concerned. The present experience, however, indicates some points where the law needs changing.
In this and other regards, and the matter should not be lost sight of.

It is now for the public to pull with a will for the success of the State Fair.
There is no division, no distinction of class or creed, but all devoted to the general good. It is a source of gratification that a magnificent exhibition is now assured. Let all work together to make the triumph as great as possible in the exposition of Utah's industrial progress in 1900.

GREAT BRITAIN IN CHINA.

It has all along been feared that international complications would arise as a result of the events in China, and the latest news from the scene of trouble is not calculated to allay those fears.
Great Britain, though professionally anxious for the maintenance of the integrity of the Mongolian empire, is now assembling a formidable fleet at Shanghai and preparing to land troops there.

These proceedings are not looked upon without suspicion by France and Germany, and it is claimed that the governments of those countries are threatening to land equally strong forces.
This would seem to mean that France and Germany intend, for every foot of ground Great Britain occupies in China, to take possession of another foot of territory. Great Britain may have no serious objection to this, but it is evident that the occupation cannot be accomplished without a series of conflicts with the Chinese themselves, and in these there always is a possibility of international wars.

Great Britain has already obtained from the Chinese government concessions in the Yangtze valley, including the managing of railways, the opening and working of mines, the navigating of rivers and trading rights at certain ports. But these concessions are not granted voluntarily, and are not based upon mutual interests. Great Britain must, therefore, be prepared to enforce her rights, and to do so, she needs a strong force on Chinese soil.

But little is known of the Russian plans, but her statements are not idle.
Mr. Colquhoun, an English author, estimates that in another couple of years the Russian empire will have entered upon its career as the great country of the twentieth century. It will gradually acquire Korea and northern China, and extend its influence as far south as the Yangtze valley. There the Bear and the Lion will again meet.
In the language of Mr. Colquhoun:

"Russia once on the Upper Yangtze would involve a second (and eastern) Indian frontier problem for Britain of an infinitely more serious character than the western. * * * On the northeastern frontier Britain can defend India only by introducing a counterbalance in China itself, by developing the Yangtze basin, which contains the greater part of the resources of the Chinese empire and half of its population, and by controlling southwest China, where lies the access to Burma and, through Burma, to India. This would afford Britain a proper base and line of defense on the Upper Yangtze, which, combined with her sea power and the control of the great Chinese waterway, would enable her to hold her own."

It is plain enough, both from the sentiments expressed by eminent writers on the Chinese question, and from what is taking place in China now, that an intensely thrilling drama is about to be enacted upon the world's stage. The Chinese riots were but an incident in the general plot. They furnished an introduction to the grand entrance of the principal actors, who may hold the attention of the world for years to come. The denouement may still be far off, or it may be nearer than even statesmen are aware of. What is taking place, however, is all preparatory for a long period of peace and happiness to the entire human family. It is the grand lesson of history that all events, no matter how seemingly contradictory, tend toward one great end—the final elevation and exaltation of mankind.

ZIONISTS HOPEFUL.

At the meeting of the Zionist congress in London, yesterday, August 14, one of the delegates from Philadelphia, Mr. G.
H. Mayer, made the important statement that the general committee is in possession of diplomatic secrets showing that the scheme is favored by many European governments which might be supposed to oppose the occupation of Jerusalem by the Jews. They are inclined to believe that they might solve the Jewish and the so-called eastern question simultaneously.

This is probably true, and the fact cannot but be encouraging to those who are anxiously looking for the redemption of the Hebrew race. Their gathering to the land of their fathers may at present appear to be a matter for the distant future, but when the time for the fulfillment of the prophecies comes, obstacles will be removed, as they were at the time of the deliverance from Egypt, or from Babylon.

The interest of Europe does no longer center in the Turkish dominions. The focus of the eastern question has shifted to the other side of the Asiatic continent, and it is conceivable that the powers before long will find the establishment of a Hebrew state in Syria a convenient arrangement, while they give their attention to the intricate problems of eastern Asia. Time alone can tell.

In the meantime it is an everlasting disgrace to London that its "Christian" mob is disturbing the sessions of the Hebrew congress, and that the police protection is unequal to the task of preventing the "booming and booting" that hails the speakers. If London "Christians" are no farther advanced in toleration and gentlemanly conduct, the judgment of the world upon the Chinese Boxers should be tempered with charity.

DECREASED BIRTHRATE.

It has been the custom of late years to point to France as an instance of a nation decaying, notwithstanding its high civilization. The country has, it is stated, the lowest birthrate of any.

Now statisticians claim that Great Britain, too, judged by the same test, is declining. It has been discovered that the rate of increase of births has been steadily declining during recent years.
It is asserted that the excess of births over deaths for the period 1891-95 was 50,000 less than for the corresponding period 1881-85, although the population in the latter period was larger by 2,000,- 000 than in the earlier.

Another comparison is made between the periods 1890-94, and 1880-84. These were years of business prosperity and rising prices, and the increase of marriages was 14 per cent during the first period and 16 during the latter. But the birthrate did not increase correspondingly. During the first period, we are told by a writer in an exchange, it was ten per cent, while during the latter period it was only one per cent.

Still another test is made. In the year 1892 the statisticians find that the excess of the births in that year over the marriages in four preceding years was 127,600. In 1894 a similar comparison shows a deficiency of births amounting to 25,300. And this tendency to slower growth of population, thus unmistakably evident in England, is said to be perceptible also in Scotland and the Australasian colonies.

The probability is that this condition is general throughout the civilized world. Civilization has placed within the easy reach of the masses of the people a number of luxuries of life, which even kings formerly did not dream. But it has also increased the cost of living, and rendered an unproportionally large number of men and women disinclined to engage in productive work for the maintenance of the human family. These causes, coupled with a growing disregard of the laws of God, are seen in a decline of the marriage rate, and still more in a decrease of births among the most civilized nations. And it is a serious question whether this is not an evidence of retrogression. What is the real difference between the practices that obtain in so-called Christendom, and the pagan practices of exposing newborn infants to death, for the purpose of lightening the burden of maintenance?

The crying evils of our age should suggest an earnest investigation into the methods by which our social structure is being built up. Were the principles of the American Constitution applied to every-day life—were every individual truly free to enjoy life, liberty and happiness, the phenomenon noted by the statisticians would probably not exist. It is not natural. It is abnormal.
The enormity of the sin of the age can best be understood by those who believe that there are numerous spirits on the other side waiting to receive their tabernacles, in order that they may fulfill their part of the great work in the world.

IRRIGATION IN PERU.

The agitation and discussion of the subject of irrigation in the Western United States the past few years is bearing direct results outside of this nation, Peru being one of the countries that is awakening to its own possibilities as a result of learning what is being accomplished in this part of the world. The South American republic has been living mainly on its products of the precious metals, and guano and saltpetre, while its neighbor, Chile, which had more low-lying moist agricultural land, has supplied Peruvians with forty-four important articles of daily use which, by means of irrigation, could be produced at home.

Attention to this fact was brought about by discussions and investigations having their foundation chiefly in Utah. From here they have spread and through irrigation congresses and publications have obtained notice from leaders of Peruvian thought and policy, until, as a result of investigation, the government has had prepared and published a volume entitled "Las Irrigaciones de la Costa" (The Irrigation of the Coast), its author being Señor Don Federico Moreno, a Peruvian writer of national reputation.

It has been shown also by practical experiments that the agricultural development of Peru can be enhanced to a wonderful degree by an irrigation system such as prevails in the West, and activity is now rife in this direction. Señor Moreno's book gives much detailed information to agriculturists, and this, with the government encouragement and construction of irrigation ditches, is opening a new future for the land of the Incas. The Utah system is being still further followed in an effort, which has the government support, to change the existing condition of immense tracts of country being held by the few to one of dividing the irrigable agricultural land among many small owners, as in the Western United States.

Thus our own country, and in this instance especially this part of it, is making a further record of benefit to its neighbors in the line of peaceful prosperity. Truly there are many good things coming out of this "promised land," and truly the rest of the Western hemisphere is looking more eagerly than before to the Great Republic as an avenue of inspiration for industrial as well as commercial and political prosperity.

There are plenty of clowns outside of the circus.

The question of occupation for boys is put aside for the day. The circus is in town.

Turks are again at the work of killing Christians. Some day Turkey instead of China will be the object of international partitioning.

A Pretoria dispatch announces that Lord Methuen has arrested Gen. De-Wet's march. Now, if he had only arrested the general.

Boy thieves are a bad sign in any community. The quicker it is removed the better, even if vigorous police assistance is necessary.

Boston condemns the use of lead pipe in water connections, because of its unhealthfulness. What about Salt Lake using so much of it?

The dispatches talk of a "third ticket." That is impracticable. There are ten presidential tickets, and the one now proposed would be the eleventh.

The French scientist who claims to have communicated with the inhabitants of Mars has failed thus far to prove that the dispatch he received is genuine.

The Chinese minister to London insists that the foreign ministers in Peking are unarmed. No thanks to the Chinese who have tried to encompass their destruction.

So China is to have a European ruler, according to the latest statement from Li Hung Chang. He will not rule long, unless he is amply protected by European soldiers.

Seven carloads of shells, shrapnel, etc., to Ogden looks like war indeed; but a vastly larger amount than that has passed through the Junction City the past two years.

Germany is determined to make of China a beggar. Since the Chinese have little money for others, they probably will want a good deal for themselves and will beg for it early.

The American commander in China again gives the first authentic news of the relief column's advance.
Those signal corps men working for Uncle Sam are deserving of great credit.

Owing to the failure of the olive crop in France, it is said that peanut oil, now largely used for commercial purposes, will be substituted for olive oil. The only objection to it would be in its sale under a false name. When people get peanut oil, they should know it.

Wisconsin has a bad case of worms.
The post destroys larvae, and it is said that no means have been discovered to check it. The worms, which are half to three-quarters of an inch in length, burrow through the turf of lawns by thousands, destroying the grass. A greasy compound probably would "fix" them, and though it might have an injurious effect on the lawn, it would be much better than the rain described as being worked by the worms.

The street car companies in suburban districts in the East have not complained of the hot weather. The reason is that great crowds of people almost smothered by the heat, took rides on the cars, to get "a breath of air," and consequently the railway companies secured a large business, dispensing coolness on the run.

On August 9, Gen. Chaffee reported the allies thirty-two miles from Peking.
The next day, August 10, they were at Matow, twelve miles further on. That left only twenty miles to be covered, and this is probably done before now. Four to five days is required to get the news through, but it is certain Gen. Chaffee will not fail to send word of the relief at the earliest possible moment.

Referring to the negro-disfranchis-ing amendment to the constitution of North Carolina, the Louisville Courier Journal comments on the probable action of the United States Supreme court, in which connection it says: "The Southern whites are not entirely confident that the grandfather clause will survive the crucible of the courts. It is understood that the North Carolina amendment is not made operative until July 1, 1902, in the hope that changes in the Supreme court by that time will render that body more favorable to the amendment than it is feared the present court might be."

An exchange asserts that "had the powers given China an assurance that no territorial acquisitions were intended on their part, there would have been no Boxer rebellion, no persecution of foreigners, and no massacre of missionaries." Not a bit of it. In the first place the "assurance" coming from European powers, would not have been believed. And further, the uprising of the Boxers is due more to the dislike of foreign missionaries than to any other cause. On that point alone the uprising would have come sooner or later, and it is questionable whether the seizure of territory had anything to do with the inception of the present movement. The Boxer rising is founded on objection to foreigners, especially missionaries, in China.

THE MARCH ON PEKIN.

New York Mail and Express.

It appears from the latest dispatches that the Americans were in the hard fighting at Peking and that almost the full strength is in the column that is marching upon Peking. Two regiments and a battery, making a continent of more than 2,000 men, were led by Gen. Chaffee into action Sunday.
Considering the relative strength of the international forces on Chinese soil, it is obvious that the Americans have been doing at least their share of the aggressive work. The bare roster of regiments engaged is convincing testimony to the reported determination of the Americans to push the advance toward the imperial capital.

San Francisco Chronicle.

What we want is to get out our people alive, and later secure compensation for their losses. If this can be best done under the fiction that no "war" exists, let us continue the fiction. It does us no harm. In war, as in other things, the least said is soonest mended, and the question of our formal relation to China and its government is one that it will be best to leave fully in the hands of the President, without embarrassing him by pressure to any step which he does not deem necessary or wise.

Milwaukee Wisconsin.

A presage of the early termination of the troubles in China is contained in the report that the result of the first engagement between the Chinese and the allies en route to Peking has resulted in a victory for the allies. From the very beginning of warlike encounters between the Chinese and the western nations, it has been tradition that a Chinese force, no matter what its number, is quickly demoralized by defeat. A mere handful of English soldiers brought the whole Chinese empire to its knees sixty years ago.

Los Angeles Express.

Even the wily Li Hung Chang has thrown off all disguise, and now openly declares that in case the troops advance the Chinese must fight. "The suggestion that the allies should be allowed to enter Peking in order to escort the ministers to Tien Tsin is absolutely impossible," is the flat-footed dictum of Chang, and he insists that a British number of parliament bring his agent at Shanghai. The tone of this message indicates that no help may be expected from Chang, and strengthens the suspicion that wily colonial has been playing a double game from the first for the purpose of gaining time.

New York Evening Sun.

It looks as if the lesson that the English learned at great expense in South Africa was about to be impressed on the minds of the rest of the civilized world—that the magazine gun has done much to place soldiers of slight training and regulars on a footing, presumptively a certain amount of skill and courage on the part of the first. The Chinese have not the natural genius for the use of the bow. But keen judges like Gordon have said that they are apt and quick to learn. Their courage, also, is unquestioned. The white man dis-dains death because he is too proud to show fear. The yellow man acts as if he feared a low estimate on life. He dies through enthusiasm. It will be a bloody journey to Peking. But no army ever set out on a more righteous task. And the civilized world is willing to pay the price, whatever it may be.

Springfield Republican.

The ministers are not only still denied free communication with their own government, but the advance of the column intended to relieve their intolerable position in Peking is resisted at Peking in a sanguinary battle. It was the third of President McKinley's conditions, preliminary to negotiating for China with the other powers, that the Chinese government, whoever controlled it, should co-operate with the relief column. And in Secretary Hay's last note to Li Hung Chang, it was pointed out that failure to restore free communication with the ministers, if the Chinese government had the power to restore it, would be an "unfriendly" act. An imperial edict is reported which declares diplomatic communications to be unrestricted, but, as a matter of fact, such is not the case in practice. If any European nation should create this situation there would be public war universally recognized.

sination of King Humbert." In which it or considerable, to the anarchistic
