BREVITIES.

The oldest cup on record—the blood.

Society shows that it is still a society.

Commonplace virtues are often a more potent enemy than the genuine.

To curb a fast young man—bridal him.

A confectioner advertises broken hearts for thirteen cents a pound.

Sheet music—The cry of children in bed.

Australia whispers of separation from England.

There are twenty-three Catholic churches in Cincinnati.

A married couple in Chicago have actually lived together eight years.

A lady whose son was eaten by cannibals pleasantly remarked that he was killed and buried the same hour.

The Sultan of Turkey has just ordered to be manufactured in Paris a silver table, the price of which will not be less than three millions of francs.

A girl in Chicago died recently, from swallowing the point of a needle, which broke off while she was picking her teeth with it.

The Israelites at New York are building a "Temple Emanuel," which will cost over $1,000,000, and be the finest Hebrew house of worship in this country.

A mathematician figures up that the clergymen cost the country annually, six millions; the lawyers, thirty-five; the criminals, nineteen; tobacco, forty; and rum, one hundred millions.

An Irishman, who had just landed, said: "The first bit of mate I ever ate in this country was a roasted potato, boiled yesterday. And if ye don't believe me, I can show it to ye, for I have it in my pocket."

A merchant in Paris was recently giving his son lessons in geography, with the atlas spread on his knees. The child said: "Father, I cannot find Moscow anywhere here." "What a stupid animal you are, dear! Have I not told you the Russians burned it in the reign of the first Emperor?"

Dr. D. P. Keen, of Attica, Ind., says he has driven every bug from his potato patch by pouring slacked lime over the vines, which, only a few days since, were totally covered with them. The Doctor says the bugs will all leave within two days after this is done. He thinks, instead of injuring the potatoes, the lime benefits them.

Dr. Johnson was observed by a musical companion to be very inattentive at a concert while a celebrated solo player was giving an extraordinary performance upon the violin. His friend to induce him to take greater notice of what was going on, explained how extremely difficult it was. "Difficult, do you call it, sir?" responded the doctor: "I wish it were impossible."

On Bull was once seeing the sights at Donnybrook Fair, when he was attracted by the sound of a very loud violin in a tent. He entered, and said to the player: "My good friend, do you play by notes?"

"The devil a note, sir."

"Do you play by ear, then?"

"Never as ear, your honor!"

"How do you play, then?"

"By main strength, be jabbers!"

There is nothing, no, nothing, that is innocent or good that dies and is forgotten. Let us hold to that faith. An infant, a prattling child dying in its cradle, will live again in the better thoughts of those who love it, and play its part, through them, in the redeeming action of the world, though its body be burned to ashes or drowned in the deepest sea. There is not an angel added to the hosts of heaven but performs its mission on earth, through those that loved it here. Forgotten! If the good deeds of human creatures could be traced to their sources, how beautiful would even death appear for how much charity, mercy and purified affection would be seen to have their growth in dusty graves.

A Parish priest was sent for to attend the death-bed of a poor old village school-mistress. She had said to her confessor she could not die in peace till she had confessed it—With broken speech she sobbed and hesitated and sobbed again. "I—I—I," she stammered out and hid her face again. "There, I must, I must tell it, and may I be forgiven! You know, sir, I have kept school forty years—a poor sinful creature—I—I—I."

"My good woman," said the parish priest, "take comfort, it will be pardoned if you are thus penitent; I hope it is not a very great sin."

"O, yes," said she; "and pray call me not good woman, I am—not good (sobbing).—Alas there, I will out with it. I put down that I taught grammar, and (sobbing)—I did not know it myself."

It is related of an Englishman living near Florence, where at last accounts the thermometer marked ninety-five degrees, that he devised an ingenious method of keeping cool. His study is walled and floored with zinc, and is kept a large tank filled brim-full with water. A few articles of furniture, such as a writing-table, a chair or two, and a well stored book-case raised upon cast-iron supports, and kept fast to their moorings by means of screws, complete the arrangements. In this retreat or aquarium, the owner passes the hot hours of the day, receiving his friends and writing his letters, with the occasional variety of a dip beneath the surface. His habits are those of a student; and it is delightful to see him sitting out every now and then with hands and feet in the direction of his dictionary or other books of reference spread open for use upon a sloping bank or ledge above water-mark.
