Prest. Simon Bamberger Plans to Take in Syracuse and Hoop. er on Line.

TO BE EIGHT MILES LONGER

"Dummy Road" Will be Operated by Steam Until Rails Are Laid Into Ogden.

Next week a force of surveyors will be sent out by President Simon Bamberger of the Salt Lake & Ogden to strike still another line between Layton in to Ogden. The new survey is to run via Hooper and Syracuse and will be some eight miles longer than the last route decided upon.

This action is to be taken following the solicitation of a number of residents of Hooper and vicinity who are anxious to have the road pass through their town. A mass meeting of citizens Is scheduled to be held witthin a few days so that some idea may be arrived at as to the inducements that will be held out to warrant the Salt Lake & Ogden, making its line between Salt take and Ogden eight miles longer than first intended.

Mr. Bamberger this morning stated that there would be no attempt to in-stail electricity as a motive power on his line until the track was completed to Ogden. At the present time between 30 and 40 teams are at work grading north of Kaysville towards Layton, but before that town is reached there will be two stiff 60-ft, cuts to be negotiated. Mr. Bamberger, however, promises to haul the residents of Layton to Conference next April.

SAFETY OF PASSENGERS. Burlington as Basis of Statistics to Show Up Interstate Commission.

In consideration of the statistics given in the accident bulletins issued by the interstate commerce commission, which are alleged to be misleading as to the safety of travel on American railroads, the General Managers' Association of Chicago has decided to conduct a campaign of education. Figures are being compiled with the casualty record for 1963 and 1964 of the Burlington as a busis, says the New York Commercial. This shows that 304,189,095 passengers were carried one mile in 1903 and only four met death on passenger trains. This is at the rate of one for every 76,047,274. During 1904, 290,914,034 were carried one mile and but three were killed, or one in every 99,071,344 passengera transported. The total number of fatalities on freight and passenger trains was four or one in every 74,978,508 passengers carried one mile. In 1903 nine were killed on both classes of trains, or one in every $5,798,788.

During this latter year no passengers lost their lives through collision or derailment, and of the four passengers killed in 1904, two, one of whom was drunk, fell from trains. The remarkable fact is shown that in the suburban service for the two years, only one per-son was killed, the cause being falling from a train. The suburban is 32 per cent of the entire travel on this road, or 3,801,225 for 1903 and 2,816,820 for 1904. In this service 47.361,605 passen-gers were carried one mile in 1903, with ger trains and six injuries on freight trains. In 1904 47,204,610 passengers were carried one mile with no death and 14 injuries on passenger and four injuries on freight trains. The increase in the number of injuries during 1904 is shown to have been due entirely to carelessness of passengers in getting off and

Although these statistics cover only one road, it is maintained that other liner will be able to make equally as favorable a showing when the accidents they have had are properly analyzed, and that it will be shown that travel on American railroads is as safe as in any
