NOT MANY WOMEN PRINTERS.

THE FAIR SEX HAS FOUND MORE AGREEABLE FIELDS OF LABOR.

Women printers a few years ago were a standing menace to the trade, says the New York Sun, and the question of their admission to the typographical union threatened to become the burning issue in the labor world. In this city it was settled for the time being by the decision of union No. 3, with the mission of union No. 5, with the mission that they be not allowed to work for less wages than men. This handicap the women bear heavily, for the trade is not in such a position as to hold her own with a man on equal terms, but even at this it is not satisfactory to the female labor market of the city, and the trouble continually threatened to break out in new significance, however, the matter has been summarily settled out of court by the printer's union.

It is said by officers of the Typographical Union No. 4 that there are not over 300 women printers in the city, and that they work chiefly for the printing offices.

... are in the same line as the printer's union. They worked as compositors, proofreaders, and in various other ways. Some of the women were in the printer's union, and some were not. The printer's union is a powerful organization, and it is not surprising that it should have taken such interest in the matter. The women printers are a body of workers who have long been in the field, and they are well known to the public. Their work is essential to the printing industry, and they have made many contributions to the advancement of the trade.

IN SLAVERY DAYS.

THE ROMANCE OF AN OLD COLORED WOMAN.

A colored woman, bent nearly double with 80 years and a heavy load of trouble, was seen to board the City of Salt Lake City yesterday afternoon. Approaching the clerk of the boat, she slowly untied a package which she had hidden under her dress. The package was a small bundle of old-fashioned calico, and the old negro is the heroine of a romance which is being told in the columns of this paper.

She was a free woman when she was a young girl, but she became a slave in the days of the American Revolution. She was married to a white man, and they had several children. Her husband was a member of the revolutionary army, and he was killed in battle. She was left with a young child, and she was forced to support him as best she could. She was a brave and industrious woman, and she was respected by all who knew her.

Mysterious Disappearances.

The records show that men and women disappear nearly every day, and it is not surprising that it should do so. The disappearances are often mysterious, and they are often the result of some strange circumstance. Some people disappear for a few days, and they are then found safe and sound. Other people disappear for good, and their fate is never known. The disappearances are often the result of some strange circumstance, and they are often the result of some strange circumstance.
