THE HIGH SCHOOL QUESTION.

The Board of Education took a wise step in accepting the prompt offer of Governor Wells on behalf of the State land board, tendering the use of the old University buildings for the High school. The disastrous fire and explosion which destroyed so much valuable property, damaged the building in which the High school was held, so that an adjournment was recommended.

It appears that the ten years' lease of the property contained a provision for its cancellation, in case of fire destroying the premises in whole or in part. There have been many objections to the long lease of the building, which is not considered fully suitable for the purpose. Whether those complaints are well founded or not we are unable to decide. But the Board of Education will now have the opportunity to settle the question of a return to those premises or a permanent occupation of University square.

The buildings which served the purposes of the University for many years are being put into proper order for the High school, and we are of the opinion will be found well adapted to its needs. Its occupation temporarily will fairly test that point, and if it is found to answer the end in view, arrangements will probably be made for its permanent ownership by the Board in behalf of the school system of the city. The High school must be maintained in its present efficiency, with an eye to its future advancement, and the acquisition of University square will probably be found the best available means of attaining the object in view.

THAT BAPTIST RESOLUTION.

According to reports which have been published, the Baptists in convention at Provo, Utah, passed a resolution, urging Congress to adopt the anti-polygamy amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which has been for some time agitated by religious people, under the false impression that polygamous marriages are common in this state. The resolution was passed in haste near the close of the session. It caused some inquiry and its adoption was largely due to the statement reported to have been made by one J. C. Andrews, of Murray, to the effect that "he had been told by persons who had reliable information, that one of the Apostles had recently taken an additional wife and probably some of the Provo people knew of other cases."

It is on just such groundless rumors that hasty people base conclusions, which suit their disordered fancy and harmonize with their biased desires. Somebody told somebody else, who told the Murray preacher, who told the Baptist convention a story that is utterly false, and so that body passed a resolution which makes all its members appear like a lot of dole or irrational zealots. Think of the argument, now, that perhaps some of the people of Provo may know of other cases, like that originating in rumor and repeated by a clerical scandal-monger!

The convention was addressed during one of its sessions by the moderator on the text: "Are we asleep?" He might well despair on that query, for the resolution adopted has the characteristics of an idle dream. "The growth of polygamy through our western states" which it speaks of, is either a wild hallucination of a wilful perversion of the truth. There is no such growth. On the contrary, there is less of it than in the eastern states, and every informed person knows that what is left of it here is growing less and less every year.

It is strange that these religious assemblies will expose their ignorance or their mendacity, whenever there is an opportunity to touch on anything relating to the "Mormon" Church. But it is a fact, that all the ferocious hostility resulting in mobocracy and murder, arson and assault, against the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, has originated from similar sources to this latest abolition of the Baptist convention. Woos unto the hypocrites and hirelings who bear false witness against their neighbors, for retribution will overtake them as sure as that truth will triumph and justice will prevail!

A CITY REBUILT.

The recuperation of Galveston, Texas, which was almost entirely destroyed by hurricane and tidal waves about a year ago, is one of the marvels, even of this wonderful age. The work of reconstruction began as soon as the people remaining could get their breath after the fearful catastrophe, and business was at once resumed, with a vim and undited energy that are highly commendable and characteristic of American enterprise.

The Galveston News, which has been a potent factor in the rehabilitation and progress of the port, published a big edition of thirty-two pages on the 1st inst., and its advertising columns exhibit the energy and push of the business people of that city, and also their appreciation of the aid afforded by a live public-spirited journal up-to-date and devoted to the public interests.

That paper gives many interesting particulars of the immense business transacted in a year in that Texas port. They are too voluminous to copy in detail. But we glean from it the following salient facts: The storm property loss at Galveston was placed at $12,000,000. The amount of money expended in rehabilitation since the storm up to date is $12,000,000, while improvements are under way or contracted for to the value of $12,000,000. The amounts spent for rehabilitation in different lines are given as follows: Building and repairing of homes, $6,000,000; wharves and shipping facilities, $1,000,000; church property, $600,000; mercantile buildings, $1,000,000; public buildings, $5,000,000; manufacturing plants, $4,000,000; municipal property, $2,000,000; embankments, hospitals, etc., $2,000,000; United States government property, $100,000; railroads, telegraphs, telephone and oil, $1,000,000; school property, $600,000.

In nature's handwork nothing is without its special use. Nature, though harsh in her creation, never is blind. Everything, as far as known, exists for a purpose, and the inference is sound that this is universal and holds good even as in such products of nature about the purpose of which man is ignorant. That the real use of an obscure member of the human system should have been unknown so long is really not surprising, if it is remembered that only comparatively recently has science found out the functions of the heart, the lungs, etc. Nor would it be surprising if anatomists should at this time at a second understanding of the use given to every part of the body in the great work of its development and preservation. Science, based upon the present path, is advancing rapidly and for every step is rewarded with new important discoveries.

AN ERA OF ANARCHISM.

When prominent anarchists find themselves cornered, they always maintain that anarchism is not responsible for the murderous deeds of some of their disciples. What these do, such as the claim—they alone are responsible for Anarchism, they say, does not teach violence in any form. Miss Goldman now reiterates the old story. "Capital's act," she says, "was foolish, probably inspired by the misery he perceived around him. But it cannot be charged to the teachings of anarchism, any more than murders committed by members of various religious or political societies can be traced to the tenets of those organizations."

This reasoning appears plausible, but it is nevertheless a fact that since 1874 there has been a regular epidemic of assassinations by persons claiming to be anarchists. President Carnot of France was stabbed in that year by the Italian, Pietro Lanza. The Spanish prime minister, Canovas, was stabbed by another Italian, Rinaldi, in 1878. In the same year President Borda of Uruguay was assassinated, and the following year President Barrios of Guatemala. In 1886 Emperor Maximilian of Austria was stabbed, while walking from a hotel in Geneva, Switzerland. King Umberto of Italy was shot in 1900, by Broad, while at his summer residence at Monza. And now the President of the United States is struck down by an anarchist assassin.

This is a long list in seven years, and it furnishes evidence enough that there is war between the anarchists and existing governments.

It is true that the lives of monarchs and rulers have always been more or less unsafe. But previous to the outbreak of this anarchistic epidemic of assassination, the assaults were nearly always directed against tyrants, and were guided by political opponents, or insane cranks. Carl Peal was murdered on the instigation of Russian nobles. Napoleon III was frequently the object of assaults by people who desired the overthrow of the empire. The cruel assassination of Tsar Alexander was inspired by Russian political conditions. But there is no political movement behind these anarchistic murders. They occur, for all that is known outside anarchistic circles, as a result of an existing desire to strike terror to society. Empress Elizabeth was a good and noble woman. King Humbert was a popular monarch who wished to do good to the people. And it is superfluous to say, that President McKinley stands both as a statesman and a man, in the front ranks of the greatest and noblest. Why then were all these selected as victims of vengeance? Wherever everything is considered, anarchistic teachings and teachers cannot be exonerated from responsibility for the sanguinary deeds.

The time is opportune for a thorough consideration of the aims and teachings of these people, and for the restriction of the dangerous premonition of the do-it-yourself to government. If it becomes necessary for the citizens to give up some of their rights to free gatherings and free utterances, they will gladly do so. Organizations that exist for the purpose of improving its members, or the building up of the community, would not lose anything by restrictions that make it impossible for treasonable societies to flourish. The world is face to face with an epoch of the time of the fall of a wily pervert, son of the truth. There is no such growth.

On the contrary, there is less of it than in the Eastern states, and every informed person knows that what is left of it here is growing less and less every year.

It is strange that these religious assemblies will expose their ignorance or their mendacity, whenever there is an opportunity to touch on anything relating to the "Mormon" Church. But it is a fact, that all the ferocious hostility resulting in mobocracy and murder, arson and assault, against the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, has originated from similar sources to this latest abolition of the Baptist convention.

NOT A USELESS APPENDIX.

At the recent assembly of medical lights in Denver, a leading surgeon of that city is said to have made the statement that the veriform appendix is by no means the useless part of human anatomy. It has been supposed to be. He states that it has a distinct secondary function to perform, serving as a lubricant to the intestines, and that interference with it must result in sickness and disorders, some of which may prove fatal.

If the Denver doctor can prove his assertion, the common impression as regards that always mysterious and sometimes troublesome appendage must be changed. Usually, whenever there was something the matter with it, they were probing for the bullet they never found. They had a scientific indicator to locate the bullet, but the indicator was always pointing in a direction that proved to be the very opposite of the and only when this is impossible, will the knife be applied.

The appendix in question has often been called on as a proof of the evolution of man from a lower animal. It has been pointed to as a relic of the time when our remote ancestors were omnivorous and therefore needed an extra stomach, or when they lived in the water and had use for a special reservoir for air. All sorts of surmises have been indulged in as to the origin of this peculiar organ. The discovery of its true function dispels all such guesses. And it must be admitted that the probability is very great in favor of the Denver surgeon's statement.

In nature's handwork nothing is without its special use. Nature, though harsh in her creation, never is blind. Everything, as far as known, exists for a purpose, and the inference is sound that this is universal and holds good even as in such products of nature about the purpose of which man is ignorant. That the real use of an obscure member of the human system should have been unknown so long is really not surprising, if it is remembered that only comparatively recently has science found out the functions of the heart, the lungs, etc. Nor would it be surprising if anatomists should at this time at a second understanding of the use given to every part of the body in the great work of its development and preservation. Science, based upon the present path, is advancing rapidly and for every step is rewarded with new important discoveries.

FRENCH FANCY OF INVASION.

The French Lieutenant Colonel Delamare is of the opinion that the recent army maneuvers in France have proved that an invasion of Great Britain by French troops is not only practicable, but comparatively easy. And it appears that he has been induced enough to say so in a French journal. He takes the view that Napoleon was doomed to failure when he planned an invasion, because he had no steam engines at his disposal, and the contents of his trunk are not dumped out on the pier." Mr. Croft shows he is easily deceived in the sense of humor when he says such a thing as smuggling could not happen in the case of persons who were known to be above any smuggling attempts. What a tourist so well known as Mr. Arment, in fact any one who is known to the manager to be above suspicion, the examination of baggage is largely a matter of form, and is not at all searching; that is, the declaration of the passenger is taken in good faith, and the contents of his trunk are not dumped out on the pier." Mr. Croft shows he is easily deceived in the sense of humor when he says such a thing as smuggling could not happen in the case of persons who were known to be above any smuggling attempts," and he gives it as an explanation of how jewels can which the duty of $12,000 were smuggled in by one "above suspicion."

THE DANISH WEST INDIES.

Baltimore Sun.

It is quite probable that the government of Denmark, as reported in a dispatch from Copenhagen, is willing to sell the Danish West Indies to the United States, and may yet go with these demands, provided that the money consideration tendered in exchange for the transfer of title is sufficient. It is understood that the government of the United States has for several years been required to pay a sum not exceeding $4,000,000 for the right of sending $4,000,000 to the United States. It is reported in the Copenhagen dispatch that the American offer has been increased to $4,200,000. Except for strategic purposes and as a "military necessity" it is doubtful whether the Danish West Indies are worth even the expenditure of a dollar.

Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Copenhagen took a look at the property and made a bid of $12,000,000 to the price offered. But Denmark received an official intimation that whatever a sale was made must be to the United States, or there might be a difficulty in making the transfer. Then began a new series of dickering, news of which was sent from time to time to the American embassy in Washington. Recent reports from Danish sources indicated that the only difficulty was the price. Denmark wanting at least the $12,000,000 promised by Secretary Seward, and President McKinley's state department offering less than $4,000,000. From one last Copenhagen dispatch it would seem that Secretary Hay had made a compromise.

New York Evening Post.

We find in the columns of a morning newspaper, contemporary, which advocates the annexation policy, an argument for the purchase of these islands for the sum of $4,000,000, this being "the amount expended by Denmark on account of the islands since the time when the United States became the owner of the same, which is exactly off the mouth of the San Juan river of Nicaragua and commands the entrance to the future canal. They have no good harbor, but they possess a roadstead which is capable of being made a good harbor and could easily be secured if the canal were not to be so far removed from the coast. This is not to say that the islands would simple be necessary to the United States in case of a war with a European power.

AMERICA'S FUTURE.

Philadelphia Record.

It has been several years since we have heard from our old friend, Professor Sauer of Austria. Although a geologist rather than an economist, he has been widely advertised as an expert authority on economic subjects and was invited to speak before the American metallurgists while the financial controversy raged so heatedly in the United States. Professor Sauer now comes forward with prophecies on another subject. The American "trusts" are comprising the principal strength of this government's determination to be supreme in Central American waters and to allow no other nation to secure a new foothold which might impinge upon its policy. With the possession of all the important strategic points in that vicinity the United States is in clear possession of a sphere of influence which no other power could with reason assume to interfere with.
