Success of Saints and Sinners.—Mr. Royle's Friends Again.—The Tabernacle Concert.—Downing—The Lyceum.

The Bladder-House Club seems come to an end this afternoon and evening. Saints and Sinners is the most emphatic and ringing artistic success of boards have seen for a long time past, and it is doubtful whether any achievement ever accompanied our local players will live longer in the memory of theater-goers than their segment of the wonderful old art who heads the cast of this play. Last night, it is pleasant to state, the audience again increased, the galleries particularly turning up, and there is every prospect that this afternoon's matinee and the farewell rendition tonight will draw heavy houses. It is sincerely hoped that this will be the case. The enormous expense of engaging an actor of Mr. Stoddard's renown, the regular running expenses of the Theater, and the heavy cost involved, made up a sum total of outlay enough to stagger the average management in these days, and we return the Theater and the Home Club equal realize, would be more than adequate for their enterprise, and a payment for the genuine pleasure the production of Saints and Sinners has given the public.

Of last night's performance, it can only be said that it showed still further improvement, and was a match unequalled to meet the enthusiasm. The length of the play moves us to admiration, but the skill with which it is carried through up to us like as old, but last night's audience did everything more that the last curtain descended at five minutes past eleven, against all odds, to give a hearty ovation to Mr. Stoddard got his hands tremulous, "all, and North Clawson, Mr. White and Mr. Speicher shared them with him. The amiable couple charmed us with their voices, and their voices did not carry over so well as they had, and elicited a much happy result to the intensity and pathos that pervades the play.

During his stay here Mr. Stoddard has remained most of his time quietly resting at his hotel, visiting with a few of his old friends. Yesterday evening the Tabernacle concert was held for the first time since the opening of the season, he said, and reached from him many of his most enthusiastic, both over the music and the speakers, and regretted he could not meet the singers in person. Mr. Stoddard and President Mr. G. Cannon are old acquaintances, and on Tuesday night President Cannon was sent a note with the announcement of his arrival. Mr. Stoddard is here for his health, having the Union Pacific Railroad conductor meeting, say, in New York Tuesday. At once came into his mind a new way which he could take to get away, which he did not fail to plan. New Yorkers as it did Chicagoans, Mr. Stoddard may rest assured of this, that the bold he always had on the hours of the rail links him to the railroad and strengthens as a man's present and prospective. Whether or not this again—when we all may not be long hence—may be avoided is a royal riddle.

Mr. Stoddard has many words of commendation for the amateur who aided him support that his talent is a sure fire to him, much as he had expected. Young players, especially this time, are not to be despised, the short time the girls had the play in rehearsal, Stoddard said, Mr. Wells quite unfeignedly, that he might step into the scenes if he might step into the scenes of life. "I am not a man for a hand-to-hand living out the 'out,' " he added, in falteringly way. "I don't do it." As an actor and the son of an actor, I say to you, your profession is a noble one. Your career's price, however, is high, and you must be a man of pure soul who knows as much about the seal of the war and all the troubles that led up to the end as he.
