President Joseph F. Smith Addresse Daughters of the Revolution And Guests at Function.

Lincoln's memory was honored tast night by the Daughters of the Revoluthou in one of the most notable celebrations of the day. A special meet ing was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Smith, its pretty inter lor" being trunsformed for the occasich into a bovrer of patriotism Throughout the rooms emblems of Lincoln were everywhere seen, while from chandaller to corners from archways and windows swung flags of all nations, a most notable collection picked up by Mr. and Mrs. Smith during many years. On tables in hall and ilbrary were seen artistic arrangement of dainty plies of wood, suggestive of Lincoln the humble rall splitter, and in miniature logs appeared hatchets in emblem also of his early work. The menu cards bore pictures of the great hero as president, and in the lower corner, showed him with ax in hand hewing logs. The flag arrangement was most beautiful. The front ball bore the hanner of the Netherlands, and in the rear hall where those of Holland in the rear hall where those of Holland and Switzerland. In the library were the flags of Great Britain and her provinces—England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, Australia and Canada, with many others. There were flags of Spain, of France, of Italy, Cuba and Mexico; flags of our expositions, the St. Louis, and Portland, with many other more private emblems, and two most conspicuous and appropriate emmost conspicuous and appropriate emother more private emblems, and two most conspicuous and appropriate emblems of the day were those of the defeated Confederacy, which draped the parior archivay. Of all the interesting souvenirs in evidence was a great shell ploughed not so long ago from the field of Lookour Mountain, its charge unspent and condition almost perfect. It had without doubt taken fired from some gun in the memorable battle of Lookout, and by rare good fortune fell into Mr. Smith's hands. Another almost invaluable memorio was a bullet, found embedded in a tree near Chicamaugu, by wood a free near Chicamauge, by wood cutters while sawing a limb from the tree. The bullet is as bright probably as when fired, These and many more interesting relies were picked up by

Mr. Smith during a long stay in the southern states, and all in evidence last night in the truly historic array rendered giving fit tribute to the memory of the man whose principles and integrity secured the permanency of the Union. Addresses on his life were made by President Joseph F. Smith, Anthon H. Lund and John Henry Smith; anecdotes connected with the Smith; aneedotes connected with the great man were given by Mrs. E. B. Wells, Dr. F. S. Wright and I. E. Wilsey, and mustcal numbers were given by Misses Ivy Evans, Margaret Summerhays, Alice Webley, Mrs. Arthur Snow and Mr. J. W. Summerhays, and a most interesting description was given by Mrs. Alice M. Horne of the St. Candon with the office of the St.

SPEAKS TO WOME ON DUMB ANIMALS

Cruelties Permitted by Humane Officer Scored by the Rev. Goshen.

BOYCOTT IS NOW PLANNED

Firms Using Crippled Horses for Delivery Will Not be Patronized By Members of Clubs.

Rev. E. I. Goshen mude a stirring udiress yesterday afternoon, before the Ladies' Literary club on the cruelties practised upon dumb beasts. He prefaced his remarks with a tribute to Dr. T. B. Beatty, president of the local Humane society, for his unremitting efforts in behalf of dumb animals whose care and protection should be the work of every good man or woman Said Mr. Goshen:

"You may have heard some tale to the effect that all fines collected on ecount of abuse of animals go into the creaming of the Humane society to treasury of the Humane society to help carry on the work. Well, I shall tell you how those funds are used so far, and why the seciety is crippled for funds and for help in its work. That money is used to pay two men to do some of the work which the present city humane officer is not doing. Time after time men have been brought into police court for working borses which were lane or otherwise disabled, and police court for working horses which were lause or otherwise disabled, and they have hauled out of their pockets permits signed by this man. This officer should be appointed by the head of the flumane society and the office should never go to a politician."

Mr. Gosten referred to the injustice that the proposed change in scipment of horses and cattle, by which at least 16 miles an hour must be covered would be made a law. The speaker stated that the present abuse of horses was due to two causes, lack of consideration on the part of shoppers who make tion on the part of shoppers who make demand as to the time of delivery houses, and because there are firms in town using horses for delivery that are physically unfit for work. Reference to the fact that members of the Ladies' Literary club are proposing to boycett firms who persist in using unsound horses, brought out applause. Mr. Goshen said that only the day before, he had seen a piece of the tongue tern from a balky horse. The case is being investigated outside of the jurisdiction of the city's "humans officer," and the driver will be punished. The speaker spoke of cruelty as shown by

AT THE JEWISH TEMPLE.

Centenary of Abraham Lincoln is Observed With Splendid Program.

The one hundredth anniversary of he birth of Abraham Lincoln was observed in a fitting manner at the Temple B'nai Israel last night. Judge Charles S. Zane, personal friend of the Great American," Governor William Spry. Judge Straup, Reverend William Phurston Brown, and Rabbi Freund, were the speakers for the occasion, and the addresses were of a nature cal-culated to fire the barts of all present with love for the memory of the departed president, and the great deeds he wrought. The temple was handsome-ly decorated with the national colors, was a picture of "The Man, the Great | American." The exercises opened with an organ prelude by Mise Pearl Rothschild, after which the invocation was offered by Chaplain S. W. Jenkinson, of the house of representatives. The "Star Spangled Banner" was sung by the audience, after which the Rev. William Thurston Brown spoke on "Lincoln and Inspiration." The Rev. Mr. Brown spoke feelingly of the mar-tyred president and stated that no executive had made as deep an impres-sion upon the minds and hearts of all Americans as had Abraham Lincoln Lincoln belongs to ne party or nation but to humanity everywhere: It is impossible to think of the life of Lincoln, from his boyhood to his death, in any other way then as an inspiration. Straup, chief justice of the supreme court of Utab. addressed the assemblage. The judge reviewed the work of "Lincoln as a Lawyer," show-ing his limited facilities for studying law, having but a single copy of an Illinois code, and how he studied that until he knew it almost from memory. Many anousing inchients of Lincoln's early law experiences were related, and early law experiences were related, and the judge concluded by describing Lin-coln as one of the geratest lawyers of Gevernor William Spry followed with a delightful address on "Lincoln as a Statesman." Lincoln always delived deeply into whatever subject was brought before him, and wat possessed of tremendous energy and forcedghted ness, and always mapped out his program with the atmost care and skill. He had many enemies, but he was possessed of a great heart. Lincoln was the greatest man to live in his day. He is today the greatest of all Americans because he preserved the Union and because he preserved the Union and scaled it with his blood. A quarted com-posed of Mrs. Corince Harris Hammer. miss Edna Dwyer, Robert M. Siddo-way and Professor Charles Kent sang "The Flag Without a Stain," after which Rubbi Freund spoke on "Lincoln, the Emancipator," "Lincoln did not only set the negroes free," said Rabbi Freund, "but the whole American peo-ple as well, for he made them realize the order of their way, and opened the path for all born here or who come to path for all born here or who come to our shores from distant lands that they may be free and equal. Charles Kent then sang "The Good Old C. S. A." Judge Charles S. Zane followed with "Personal Recollections of Lincoln," which was a veritable treat to all pres-ant.
