CLUB CHAT.

The presence of a number of women at a recent meeting of the city council of Pittsburg was something of an inno-The knowledge that the women were well versed in parliamentaary law is said to have been somewhat discon-certing, and the acting chairman was certing, and the acting charman was thrown into confusion when several points of order were raised. The wo-men made some rather pointed criti-cisms of the proceedings. They were members of a patriotic society which is interested in the preservation of the land around Fort Duquesne site.

As a result of a garden party given by the Era club of Pittsburg, the fol-lowing committees engaged in civic enterprises under the direction of the Civic club of Allegheny county were benefitted: Juvenile court committee $100; tennement house committee, $50 stoe; tennement house committee, so; streets and sewers, $10; consumers' league, $25; playgrounds and vacation schools, $50; smoke abatement commit-tee, $10; public baths, $25; library, $10. An excellent example of energy and good judgment in distribution.

FEMININE FLOTSAM

According to the statistics 102 girls under 14 years are actresses in Eng-land. Also it is disclosed that a girl of land. Also it is disclosed that a girl of 10 is acting as a general shopkeeper, while another only a year older, is re-turned as a pawnbroker. Ten little maids, just 10 summers each, are en-tered as engaged in the laundry and washing service. The cares of a busi-ness life have begun at the same are for at least one girl connercial clork, and there are two girls of 11 for whom school would be a fitter place than the school would be a fitter place than the public house bar, in which they serve. Another girl has entered before her teens into the ranks of Scripture readteens into the ranks of Scripture read-ers and itinerant preachers.—Exchange. One woman in the English census fig-ures is returned as a dock laborer. There are also five female farm serv-onts returned as in charge of horses, while four women are working as blick-layers, four as bollermakers, two as locksmiths and one as a coppersmith. In some other trades the number of women is surprising. Women brewers rumber nearly 100 and women builders 177, while the lightermen, bargemen, beatmen, boatmen and pilots who, belyseamen, boatmen and pilots who, bely-ing their name belong to the fair sex, run into several hundreds.-Exchange.

According to recently published sta-tistics, there are in round numbers 75,000 persons employed in the dress-making establishments in Paris. If the making establishments in Paris. If the workers who design and make the materials used by the dressmakers are included, uyward of 1,400,060 persons are engaged in the struggle to satisfy woman's love for chillons.—Exchange.

It appears that the pinafore is to be fashionable once more, and manufac-turers are trying to make the new models as dainty and charming as pos-sible. For children the full gathered pinafore hung from a shallow yoke is

England, who worked out the first con-ception of electric waves 10 years before Marconi was born; to Reinrich Hertz, of Karlsruhe, who proved the exis-tence of the waves, and discovered a way to measure them, when Marconi was 13; and to Prof. Righi, of Genea; Prof. Eduard Branly, of Paris; to Sir Oliver, Ledge of Berneinham, to Long

Oliver Lodge, of Barmingham; to Jaga-dis Chunder Bose, of Calcutta; to Popdis Chunder Bose, of Calcutta; to Pop-off, of Russia, and to several others who have made Marconi's wonderful work possible. And there are American systems now in practical use at short distances—the De Forest and the Fes-senden systems among others. But Marconi "was probably the first to sig-nal at a distance of more than a mile," writes Mr. Snyder, who then gives an writes Mr. Snyder, who then gives an accurate account of the young man's actual achievement,

It's strange how women use words. It's strange how women use words. I know a beautiful girl who sometimes looks at me in a way that makes me feel prouder than any king, but I can't teach her to use some of her words just right. The words "love" and "like." for instance, are two that she always gets mixed up. I've been waiting for six weeks to hear her say that she loves me, but she won't do it. Sometimes me, but she won't do it. Sometimes she answers: "You know, Alfred, that I l-like you very much, and would be

I 1-like you very much, and would be awfully unhappy if you were to go away and we were never to see each other again." Or it may be that in answer to a question from me she will say as she looks down and speaks very seefily: "Yes, I think I must have 1-liked you the first time I ever saw you." She merely "1-likes" me, but you should hear how enthusiastically she can say she loves fishballs.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Among the prettiest materials of the year are the new silk grenadenes. They are as sheer as gauze and have a fine satiny finish. White grenadine with a sating thirds. White grenadine with a pattern of strewn roses formed the material of a lovely dancing gown. It was simply made over pink taffeta and had a bertha and sleeve caps of point lace, and a girdle with long ends of black velvet ribbon.
