CLUB CHAT.

The Current Events and Current literature section of the Ladies' Literary club met yesterday afternoon at the club house and Mrs. G. V. Parmelee reviewed the book, "From Panama to Patagonia," while Mrs. Charles Read, who is well known as Miss Edythe Elterbeck, read an original story which well illustrated her delightful style.

The Women's club held a very interesting meeting this week at the home of Mrs. John L. Bowman. Mrs. P. N. Cook gave a paper on "Phillips Stevens," and Mrs. Armstrong gave a number of readings of poems by the poet. The next meeting will be held with Mrs. V. Pease, when Mrs. Cleson S. Kinney will review the work done at the recent federation in Park City.

A new section has been added to the Ladies' Literary club to be called the art section. A number of women interested met Monday afternoon at the club house. Mrs. W. H. Bantz was chosen chairman, with Mrs. C. H. Blanchard as assistant chairman. The section will meet the first and third Thursday mornings of each month at the club house at 10 o'clock. The first meeting was held Thursday morning, Nov. 1, when Mrs. Blanchard gave an introductory talk on "Architecture."

The international feature of women's clubs is the means of bringing women the world over more closely together in great reform movements, while the social interchange between women of all nations is full of promise towards the great ideal of universal sympathetic understanding.

Many American women are active members of clubs in London, Berlin, Paris and other European centers. It is a constant experience of such women to receive letters from women who are about to visit Europe, asking how they may become members of foreign clubs. While the women visiting in our country provide themselves with a list of American members of the foreign clubs, knowing that the presentation of a visiting card bearing the name of their common club increases their personal welcome and interest that tends to make a visit to our country doubly attractive.

The general federation of women's clubs recognizes the great value of international courtesies, and has a committee appointed for the extension of the work of bringing women together in a great universal bond. Mrs. Philip N. Moore as foreign correspondent, has published her report which says:

Organized work is certainly not confined to America, but wherever the flag incentives across the water came from our American women who, for one reason or another, are established on foreign soil.

An example we are proud to point out is the Society of American Women in London, whose president sends a plan of work for the educational department. Others are the American Women's Literary society of Shanghai, China; the Pioneer Club of London; Sorosis of Bombay; the interesting Sorosis School of Colombo, India; Sorosis of Saito, Mexico, sending a delegate to this convention; and the Karakatta club of Perth, Australia, with a most interesting report from the president.

An important factor in the life of the American colony in Berlin is the American Woman's club, of which Mrs. Charlotte Power is president. It is the first woman's club in Germany, founded 12 years ago; is serious in purpose, comprehensive in scope, and around it is rallied all that is best in the energetic American life of the German capital. It was established as a charity relief organization, assisting girls who came to Germany to study. It now furnishes dormitory accommodations and class work in French and German, and a general information bureau, besides being a rendezvous for all Americans. The Lyceum club of London is the center of great artistic, literary and professional work. It was started to afford facilities for women journalists and writers, with something of a literary agency attached; and it has established branches in France, Germany, Italy and Holland, with interchangeable membership. Miss Constance Smedley, the founder, one of our honorary members, writes: "The Lyceum club is developing with such incredible swiftness that what we had thought would be a matter of 10 or 20 years now seems to be possible in the near future. Qualifications for membership include the publication of works and contributions to periodicals in literature, science, or music, and in paintings, engravings, or illustrations."

The Deutsche Frauen Klub of Berlin has a home in the center of the city. There are literary evenings once a week, with lectures on a wide range of subjects. There are about 400 members, women prominent in social and literary circles. At two receptions only during the winter is the profane foot of man allowed to tread the floors of the club.

Out of this club grew a larger club with smaller dues, intended to meet the needs of business women. This is the Frauen Klub of Berlin, which opened its doors in 1900, and now has 1,000 members. They are doctors, dentists, artists, librarians, teachers, journalists, etc. Fraulein Dr. Thibert is one of the leading women doctors in Berlin, is the president. Letters from this club are most interesting.

The clubs of Hanover, Wiesbaden, Halle and Stuttgart, and especially of Dresden, are organized to supply working girls and unmarried women with a place of amusement and social diversion.

The associations of Canada are very much like our own, and there should be some common ground of affiliation.

In Stockholm the Frederika Bremer association is a federation of women's clubs for the advancement of the political and legal status of women; it is the leading Swedish economic organization among women. The crown princess is president of the Milk association of several cities, founded by her—a movement much like that organized by Nathan Straus. There are clubs in France, Holland, Italy, Austria and Switzerland, which should at some time join forces with the industrial work of the general federation.

Men Admire Neatness In Women.

A YOUNG man has written asking my advice as to the wisdom of breaking his engagement.

He says that he loves his sweetheart, but that she is so distressingly untidy that he fears he could never live happily with her. He has spoken to her time and again about this serious fault, but with no good result.

I cannot advise him to marry her, for I know that no girl who is untidy about her person and the house could make a good wife. She could not make a man comfortable, and no man's love is proof against discomfort.

Untidiness also means extravagance, and an extravagant wife is a drawback to any man.

This young man differs in nowise from his fellow men. There is no man living who does not dislike slovenliness and untidiness in a woman.

No matter how pretty a girl may be, if she is untidy it seriously detracts from her beauty.

The plain girl, of course, can still live afford to be untidy, but she need have no qualms about being pleasant to look upon if she keeps herself exquisitely neat and dainty, for neatness and daintiness have a beauty all their own.

Many a man's interest in a girl has been checked because he found her to be untidy about her home.

If a town where I used to visit there lived a family of charming girls.

They were pretty and bright, and always surrounded by young men. But they did not seem to marry.

Other girls less attractive married, but these three pretty girls, though apparently great belles, remained single.

I asked a young man friend what the cause of it was, and he said that all the men were afraid to marry any of them because they were so notoriously untidy.

"They are pretty and jolly," he said, "but they are untidy personally, and the house abominably untidy. I do not believe the window curtains have been washed in years, and there are dust and dirt in every corner. No man would care to trust his future to such shiftless extravagance and discomfort."

So you see, girls, good looks and good manners are not the only qualities required in the winning of a husband.

NATIVE DOGS OF ALASKA.

Are One-half Timber Wolf and Howl Instead of Barking.

The native Alaskan dog is known as the "huskie" or "malamoot" and is a mongrel—one-half timber wolf. He has characteristics which especially fit him for his work—he is heavy set, with a thick coat of long hair, impervious to snow and with less complaint in his nature to make him restless, eager to go, and with a sufficient mixture of dog to temper a ferocious and treacherous which might, and sometimes goes, become dangerous, says Leslie's Weekly.

All this, unless understood, is carefully studied and watched by the Alaskan, and those qualities which manifest themselves in fidelity and gentleness are encouraged by kind treatment, while the wolfish side of their nature is quickly and effectually subdued by numerous whippings. These animals have not yet learned to express themselves by barking and the only noise they can make is a dismal howl.

It is a rare occurrence for them to bite a human being, but they will fight among themselves at the slightest provocation, and it is not an uncommon sight for half a dozen "huskies" to hold a pitched battle on the frozen ground, and a bucket of cold water will generally put them to fight, but in the majority of cases the dog who has started the noise and allow the dogs to fight it out.

The wolf nature manifests itself in their thieving propensities, and all food must be "huskied" out of their reach. A hungry "huskie" will open a box of canned beef with ease by climbing through the hole in the door of a tent or cabin, pending to be asleep, when in reality he is waiting for a chance to run back to the house, the day I saw a huskie's dinner wrecked by his own dog, a splendid, big, wolfish fellow, who overcame the dog who had been in the most unbecoming manner walked off with the hot bacon in his mouth.

No matter what deprivations they may commit, severe punishment, so as to cripple or kill them, is out of the question, as no great value is placed in the transportation of supplies. It is an inferior dog that is not worth $0 and many of them, say their masters, are not for sale.

Two good dogs can haul a man 40 or 50 miles a day on a good trail, or carry from 50 to 60 pounds of freight about 20 miles in six hours. They are faithful to the last degree and are not to be trusted when weak from lack of food. When in this condition, however, they sometimes become dangerous, and should be treated as such. It may be attacked, but these instances are rare and more often the dog is sacrificed to save his master from starvation.

Absolutely no incurable cases, every pup becomes a living advertisement.

Neatness is the foundation of good style in dress.

A gown may be absolutely up to date in every respect, but if it is put on in a slovenly fashion the wearer will have no style.

AGNES SENDS THIS CHARMING MODEL.

No material develops to better advantage for an afternoon frock than the coolen poplin, one of the new coloume weaves of the fall season, that has the advantage of being good looking and not expensive. The smartest women are wearing dozens of this stuff, the favored colors appearing to be crab-apple pink and chasseur blue. The frock illustrated, made by Beer, is of chasseur blue poplin, and shows a novel arrangement panels in velvet suggestion, and a very novel pattern of overlapping tabs. Deep blue velvet pipes the seams and forms the girle.
