BREVITIES.

The French public debt has increased $561,200,000 since 1863.

A rooster with horns is an ornithological curiosity at San Leandro, Cal.

A writer in the Revolution demands for wives equal pay with wet nurses. Gentlemen engaged to be married are now politely termed husbands by brevet.

Boxes of gold were presented to the Pope at the recent festival, heavier than one man could lift.

A Poughkeepsie woman cut the throat of her child not long since, in order, she said, to "do the child a kindness."

London has a new penny weekly, the Protestant announced as "anti-Romanist, anti-Ritualist and anti-Rationalist."

Major De Lancy, a negro, who served in the Federal army during the late war, is lecturing on the "Progress of Civilization" in the Georgia towns. He says Adam was a yellow man.

Three hundred duels were fought last year in Paris. The police were informed of about one-third of them before they were fought, but refused to interfere.

Only ten volumes, of something less than seven hundred pages each, will comprise the proposed printed correspondence of the two Governments on the Alabama claims.

Cubical blocks of steel, or large plates, can not readily be magnetized. But if slits be cut in a block so as to convert it into a series of plates connected by transverse bars, a permanent magnet may be made.

A Pennsylvania Radical, practising the ultra tenets of his party, allowed his daughter to marry a negro, and now mourns the consequences in the discovery of an illicit intimacy between his son-in-law and another daughter.

The latest kerosene accident was in Hoboken, when a can of that oil exploded while a reckless woman was dishing a lighted lamp. She rushed down stairs and into the street, enveloped in flames, and was burned to death. Her husband, frantic with fright, threw his little boy out of the window and then jumped after him, killing himself.

We had related to us the other day an anecdote of an old lady who formerly entertained travelers in a neighboring county. Before the guests commenced a meal, it was her custom to ask a blessing. "Oh Lord! make us truly thankful for the food set before us. Nancy, hand around the corn bread first, and then the biscuit afterward, Amen!"

Shamyl, the vanquished hero of the Caucasus, is making a pilgrimage to Mecca, where he is likely to meet Abd-el-Kader, whose daughter, by the way, has become a convert to Christianity. The sincere chagrin of the Arab Chief, however, he had the good sense to let the young girl follow Hamlet's advice to Ophelia, and go to a nunnery.

The new coal fields along the line of the Union Pacific railroad are found at numerous points between Echo Canon and Cheyenne, a distance of 480 miles. The veins are many of them large and so easily accessible that there appears to be no limit to the supply, and it is even expected that the coals will soon be introduced in California to compete with those from Monte Diablo, Oregon and British Columbia. The quality is good, some being anthracite and free from sulphur.

King John, of Saxony, has completed his translation of Shakespeare's "Hamlet," and recently said to a bookseller that if he lived long enough he might translate the whole works of Shakespeare. The old monarch is exceedingly active and industrious. He rises at six in the morning, and often works until after midnight.

A man wearing a pair of spotted pantaloons took a noontide siesta under a tree in the neighborhood of Madison, Indiana. A German, who was out hunting, saw his leg hanging over a rock, and mistaking it for a huge boa constrictor fired a charge of shot into it. The moral is obvious. Don't wear spotted pantaloons when you take an out-door nap in Indiana.

"I cannot," So answered a boy when directed by a rich merchant to write what was not true to a customer. "Why not?" asked the merchant angrily.

"Because it would not be true, sir," was the firm, but respectful answer.

"I hope you will always be as particular," replied the merchant, turning upon his heel, and going away.

What do you suppose happened to the boy? Lost his place? No. The merchant was too shrewd to turn away one who would not write a lying letter. He knew the value of such a youth, and instead of sending him away, made him his confidential clerk.

King Billy, of Tasmania, has just died. He had been employed for some time on a whaler, and, having received his pay, he speedily drank himself to death. After he was dead, the Royal Society of Tasmania petitioned the Government to allow them to put his skeleton in their museum. Their request, however, was refused, and orders were given that the body should be decently interred. It was discovered a few days ago that his body had already been twice outraged "in the interests of science." Before it was interred, the hospital surgeon and his assistant got access to the remains of the dead monarch, skinned his royal head, and having taken out the skull, substituted a white man's cranium in its place and drew the dusky skin of the original as well as they could over its facial bones. The next party of resurrectionists discovered the fraud, and so it leaked out.
