PROVO.

The eighty-fifth birthday of M. J. Jane Riggs was appropriately celebrated on the 4th of September by her grandchildren and great-grandchildren. The gathering took place at the beautiful fruit farm of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Beesley. It proved to be a happy crowd, the very guests being the guests of honor, dear grandmothers Riggs, whose remarkable young spirit, combined with her wisdom of her four score years and a personality of unusual cheerfulness and contentment made her easily the center of all attention. Disposing of the banquet occupied a good share of the day; as the tables represented almost every edible product of Utah. The fruit farm of course had the most liberal showing in the shape of luscious ripe peaches, grapes, apples and pears, but the poultry farm was also well advertised and the vegetable garden and even the creameries though their output was somewhat changed and improved by contact with the product of the ice house. The day was one of pleasure and satisfaction to all as well as a tribute showing the high respect in which Grandmother Riggs is held by her family. Among those present were Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Stewart, Messrs. and Mrs. Edwin A. Peay, Andrew Stewart, Scott Stewart, John Stewart, Joseph Bullock, Ben Bullock, Messrs. J. B. Beesley, Marilla Beesley, Merle Beesley and Mattie Beesley, and Mr. John Beesley.

MODIFIED DIRECTOIRE STYLE.

The best features of the Directoire style are exemplified in this smart imported model of very light fawn cloth. The vest is cut in one with the fronts, being caught into the single dart. The coat follows the vest outline to below the waist, a row of handsome buttons appearing either side. There is a little cape cap, also garnished with buttons, over the left sleeve, and the flaring cuffs are fashioned, three of them, to run from wrist to elbow. The skirts are long, coming almost to the knee, the vest is concealed by the classical jabot of real lace, and the waist frills are of the same web. A little touch of Oriental embroidery appears on the cut-out neck.

Among those present were the following: Miss Marie Bush, Mrs. B. A. Bush, Misses Virgie and Leah Bush, Edith Ross, Lulu Trane, Julia Bone, Nellie Cross, Amy Shilp, Sadie Davis, Emma Woodhouse, Alice Roberts, May Whipple, Birdie Stoddard, Laura Knudson and Jennie Bromley.
