

Conference, the fair, the theaters with their many parties, to say nothing of home entertainments, have made the week a gala one, and its echoes promise to resound for many days to come. The throngs present during conference always lend a spirit of bustle and cheer, that carries an atmosphere into streets and homes which is half the aroma of social life. Many entertainments public and private have been given in honor of visitors to the city, and others still are planned for many of the remaining guests, * * *

The largest social affair of the week The largest social affair of the week was the reception held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. McCune on Tues-day night in honor of the survivors of the old time "Muddy Mission," in which the hostess' father, Samuel Claridge, took a prominent part. These, with a number of other invited guests, includ-ing the first presidency of the Latter-day Saint Church, and other officials, were present to the number of about 150, and spent a most enjoyable eve-ning going through the beautiful rooms of the McCune mansion, and in old-time reminiscences. of the meculation time reminiscences.

A COMBINATION IRISH CROCHET AND VALENCIENNES.

A marked characteristic of the dressy separate waist this season is the combination of various materials, such as net and lace, net and silk and various kinds of lace, particularly Irish crochet and Valenciennes, the latter taking the form of all-over. An Irish crochet lace collar with front panel extending to the waistline is made use of in this blouse of Normandy Val. The Vandyke points of the collar are appliqued on the net, which is cut away beneath, and the yoke of the crochet has a sheer mousselaine lining. Sleeves are medium sized puffs with cuffs of motifs.

WALKING COSTUME WITH SATIN SASH.

One of the smartest of the more practical walking costumes designed for the younger set this fall is that in a black and white striped fine cheviot. It has all the earmarks of the very newest modes, the skirt being circular and only some three yards in width and the coat the new length, which covers the hipline. But the most pronounced feature of this model is the Directoire sash of black satin, which encircles the waist and knots softly at the left of the bias front panel of the short skirt. The ends of this sash are weighed with heavy silk cord ornaments and long tassels. White cloth braided with silver
