

OGDEN, UTAH, FEB. 12, 1896.

Junction City Items. The case of the State of Utah against Henry Allen, a railroad man, who was killed at the back of a train on the corner of Twenty-fifth street and Grand avenue, is before the district judge. The work of examining a jury occupied the court till 4 o'clock today, and was continued at 10 o'clock late morning. There is much interest taken in the case.

PROVO, UTAH, FEB. 12, 1896.

Garden City Notes. At a meeting of the city council held Monday evening, the water for a city job was referred from it to the council. As a step in the appointment and confirmation of the city officers, the council, the mayor, the city treasurer and city clerk were temporarily dismissed. They are to be re-appointed by the council, the council having refused to confirm the mayor's appointees to succeed Mr. Altred.

Two small boys stole several sticks of giant powder from the store of the late Mr. M. S. H. and were taken to the police station. They explained several sticks, but strange to say were not injured. After their arrest, they refused to divulge the hiding place of the explosive unless given their liberty and carried their point, after which they returned the stolen property.

The case of A. M. Davis vs. the R. G. W. Railway company, has been settled out of court. Plaintiff sued the defendant corporation for $200, for cattle killed by the railway company in a field on the 11th of September, 1895.

The fourteenth annual assessment of the U. A. H. department of Utah will be held in this city next Friday. Department officers will be chosen at the assembly. A ball will be given in the Opera house in the evening.

A number of young fellows have organized a club for the purpose of literature and history, which will be known as the Magna Lili club.

Mrs. A. C. Horvath, who has been very ill is recovering.

MAKING BUTTER COME IN WINTER. The Youngs Live Often in Taking Care of the Cows.

But in regard to the difficulties of the season something may be said in a helpful way. The most trouble is in the making of the butter—that is, the trouble appears there. The real test of it, however, may be in quite another direction. The feeding has a great deal to do with the character of the cream that may be thought. Much mischief is done by those persons who will insist in spite of all evidence that the feeding has nothing to do with the quality of the cow's milk. On the contrary, it has everything to do with it—its quantity, its quality and its behavior in the churn, or, to speak more accurately, with the behavior of that part of it we know as the cream. At the first thought the difference is seen to be very great. The cows are out of their grass pasture, are not enjoying the warm sunshine and the fresh open air, but are chilled by the cold and have to exist on the dry, if not tasteless forage of the still used pasture of the hay or fodder that has been sun-dried by the heat of the summer. This is a very great change. And necessarily the milk suffers the first.

It must appear reasonable that the churning of the cream may be expected to differ very greatly under these circumstances, and that unless the management differs equally there will be very great trouble. Much may be done to alleviate this difficulty. The hay or the fodder may be cut and wet and mixed with the grain feed in due proportion to make up for the difference between it and the summer grass.

The cows may be kept warm and comfortable in the night, and the milk kept in a warm place in which it will be ready for skimming at the end of the usual period of 24 hours. But may be given to the cows every day; this is a very important matter, although a small one apparently, for it may change the character of the milk considerably. The cream skimmed in the usual way may be kept at the right temperature of 55 degrees and it is in the usual case condition, and may be skinned at the same temperature in a room of equal temperature as the cream. All this may be done if the temperature is maintained. It is indispensable that the conditions that govern everything in the dairy in the summer should be equally preserved in the winter, then all will go on smoothly, and with the same result every time. The conditions of all winter are the same as the summer, in spite of the change in the temperature. In the summer, but as soon as temperature changes the difference becomes a source of the most exhausting trouble—that is, by those persons who do not realize the importance of this agency in the dairy.

So that, unless the cows are kept as warm as usual, by the proper arrangement made in the stable, unless the food is made to approach nearly to the condition of the summer feeding, unless the milk and cream are kept at the same temperature as in the summer, and the churning is done under the same conditions exactly, the butter maker will be like the alchemist without a chart or a key, and will be unable to produce his gold or silver or any other thing but a mass of waste.
