Twin Falls Country Growing—D. M. Landreth has just returned from Twin Falls, accompanied by R. G. For 400 miles the houses of new settlers are scattered, and the soil is being so successfully cultivated under the new system of irrigation that it is claimed in a few years the country will prove to be far superior to California as a fruit producer, because the soil is considerably richer and the fruit is therefore sweeter.

With the coming of the boat, and the prospect of others, the matter of a draw bridge on the Lucin cutoff is again broached, and it almost seems as if the matter will be taken up by the department which before long the war department will be asked to compel the Southern Pacific to put in a draw-bridge.

Z. C. M. PROMOTER IS LAID TO REST

Funeral of Henry W. Naisbitt. Who Took Active Part in Organizing Institution.

RECORD BUYER IN NEW YORK.

How He Purchased $675,000 Worth of Goods Under Great Difficulties—His Life Story.

The funeral services in the Twelfth ward chapel yesterday accompanying the interment of the remains of Henry W. Naisbitt were decidedly impressive. President Joseph F. Smith and the other speakers one and all contributed towards making the occasion one to be remembered by the many friends of the deceased.

According to the wish of Elder Naisbitt, bit no crape was worn and black as a sign of mourning was excluded. In the absence of Elder Orson F. Whitney, some compositions by the deceased were read by Elder Joshua H. Paul. The musical features, especially a duet on the organ and violin by the deceased and Prof. Clive, were beautiful, while the floral tributes were numerous and appropriate.

THE LATE HENRY W. NAISBITT.

The remarks by President Joseph F. Smith were deeply appreciated. He spoke at length of the ability of the deceased, and read selections from his hymns and dwelt on his labors in England and general devotion to the cause. President Smith paid the departed high compliments as a worker and a zealous man.

President John R. Winder followed along similar lines and incidentally drew the attention of his auditors to the fact that it was Henry W. Naisbitt who gave to the Church the trees which adorn the temple block.

President Francis M. Lyman's address was in the same vein and all three speakers spoke words of consolation to the bereaved.

The last speaker was Bishop Romney who dwelt on the virtues of the departed and incidentally mentioned that the trees which surround the Twelfth ward chapel today were donated by Elder Naisbitt.

At the cemetery the grave was dedicated by Elder Herbert J. Fowler.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY EXTRACTS.
Among the effects of the late Henry W. Naisbitt was encountered a brief autobiography telling his life history from the time the writer was stirred by the religious controversies waged in the little obscure village of Northallerton, England, down to the period when his eyesight commenced to fail.

From this document one follows him investigating every creed brought to his notice, his skeptical visits to the Catholic church in Liverpool in 1850, where Apostle Orson Pratt was preaching, and his final acceptance of the gospel.

On Dec. 24, 1853, he married Elizabeth Paul, and sailed on March 11 in the bark John M. Wood for New Orleans. Of the incidents of the voyage Mr. Landreth says the way the Twin Falls country is growing is remarkable. For 400 miles the houses of new settlers are scattered, and the soil is being so successfully cultivated under the new system of irrigation that it is claimed in a few years the country will prove to be far superior to California as a fruit producer, because the soil is considerably richer and the fruit is therefore sweeter.

SLAVE MARKET.
"One instance I remember to this day," he wrote, "I have been taught with a religious zeal that slavery was an abomination. We were stirred to the very depths to see a fairly good looking woman, whose husband was a free man, sold at auction block and sold to the buyer for $1,750, and the sale and purchase of a colored man for something over $3,000 said to us, however, that if men invested so much money in those said to be slaves, they surely would take as much care of them as an ordinary man would take care of an animal. Henry was a great deal of money, and all his horrors and privations in the tearing asunder of families, has yet its sunny side, and it almost seems as if in later years the happy-go-lucky character of the negro population was unfettered for content with the world and content with its discipline and difficulties."

PIONEER FURNITURE.
The outfitting for the long trip across the plains, and the privations en route are all told upon and his first meal in Salt Lake which consisted of a dish of tomatoes also is not forgotten. How he was given a lot by President Brigham Young who noted as an animal which was a great deal of money, and all his horrors and privations in the tearing asunder of families, has yet its sunny side, and it almost seems as if in later years the happy-go-lucky character of the negro population was unfettered for content with the world and content with its discipline and difficulties."

Just when he was making headway after moving to Pleasant Grove, then known as Battle Creek, fire destroyed all he had and he and his wife and two children escaped in their night clothes. They were absolutely penniless.

Even this calamity failed to quench his optimism for the writer proudly boasts that it was the first big fire in Utah.

Later he became the buyer in California for William Jennings in 1869 after merchandising for William Nixon in Camp Floyd and Salt Lake City for some time.

Z. C. M. I. ORGANIZED.

About this time Z. C. M. I. was organized. Of this great movement Henry W. Naisbitt wrote in his autobiography:

"The writer was the first to publicly declare in the school of the prophets the necessity for this mercantile association, and, as a consequence, when President Young decided to organize, he was placed upon the committee for preparing the constitution and by-laws, and afterwards selected to take the goods which had been promised by the local merchants, some for the reduction of stock and some to sell out entirely, and still later was selected as the first buyer to go to New York to buy goods and open the credit of the institution."

BUYING GOODS IN NEW YORK.

"It was a peculiar position in which he found himself. He could have bought for himself or in the name of Mr. Jennings, but to buy for an unknown, and not yet established institution under the superintendency of Brigham Young was altogether a difficult problem. The situation was dark, but, according to instructions, Capt. Cooper was called from Washington to help out in the emergency period. His visit, however, was rather a detriment than a benefit. There is no doubt that the success was finally reached. Money began to pour down from Utah to the credit of the buyer, and after eight months' steady and absorbing work, at the instance of a telegram from Brigham Young,

"Buy a bottle today."
