COUNTERFEITERS' DEN IN THE CITY.

Police Believe That There is a Small Plant Located Here in Salt Lake.

CANC IS "SHOVING THE QUEER."

Several More Victims Numbered Among The Salt Lake Merchants—Poor Imitations of Gold Pieces.

The police are beginning to believe that in the near vicinity of this city there is a counterfeiters' den where bogus gold pieces are made, and that there is a gang of men whose business it is to pass the worthless coins on the unsuspecting public. When young Grant was arrested a couple of weeks ago on the charge of passing worthless coins, purporting to be genuine $10 gold pieces, it was thought there would be no more complaints from Salt Lake merchants. But in this the police were badly mistaken. During the last few days numerous complaints have been lodged at police headquarters, to the effect that counterfeit money was being circulated. The police managed to secure several $10 and $5 pieces, and this morning a bogus $5 was passed at P. W. Madden's store on First South, and another was passed at Robinson's drug store. How any one, at all accustomed to handling money, could be deceived by the base counterfeit, is something that puzzles the police. The coins are made of some very light material with a thin coating of gold foil which can be easily scraped off with the finger nail. The discovery of so many of the bogus coins has caused some of the officers to believe that they are made in or near this city.

MURDEROR ACCIDENT?

Charles A. Packenham of Boise Dies by Bullet from T. J. McGinness.

(Special to the "News.")
Boise, Ida., Dec. 1.—Charles A. Packenham, foreman at the X ray tunnel in Black Horns district, and for many years a prospector and mining man here, died at Alphonso's hospital this morning, from wounds inflicted last Wednesday afternoon, by Thomas J. McGinness, on the road to Highland, about two miles above Kelley's. Hot Springs, McGinness and two companions, James Kelley and C. O. Still, were going deer hunting, and after passing Packenham, who was on foot, McGinness fired, as he says, at a rock by the roadside and the glancing bullet struck Packenham in the chest, deflecting into the right lung. The party brought the injured man to this city. Next morning, Packenham's brother swore to a complaint, charging assault with intent to commit murder, and this was changed today to a charge of murder.

Amusements

Miss Arvilla Clark scored a great success at the Tabernacle last evening. The big auditorium held 700 or 800 people, enough to make a handsome audience in any other building in the city, but in the Tabernacle it could not help seeming rather dispiriting turnout. The reception it gave the singer and the program generally, however, was of the heartiest and most emphatic sort. Miss Clark already has a wonderful voice, and with the her schooling she intends giving herself, it is not too much to expect that she will be fully capable of taking the place in grand opera that she occupies in the German dramatic fervor. Her voice, a contralto or mezzo, seems to have no limit, for in the aria from "Samson and Delilah" she sang into soprano notes that simply astonished her audience. "Oh That We Two Were Maying" was another beautiful rendition, and the venerable "Home, Sweet Home" showed her tone quality and her feeling off to a charm. She had some hearty recalls and some beautiful floral offerings.

The new tenor, Mr. Kirkham, gave the impression of being nervous at first, but the big building, after he had secured his bearings, he grew in favor and was heartily applauded, especially for "Mourning Zerk," which was probably the selection best suited to his voice, and the duet with Miss Clark, "Still As The Night." In this he sang as well as he could, and his tone quality and his feeling off to a charm. He sang with good taste and style, and conveyed the impression that in a small building he would give a much better performance of himself. Mr. McClellan had a positive ovation for his several numbers, and was given two recalls. His rendition of "Grand Overture in D" was as majestic as his voice and melody were delicate and entrancing.

The choir under Prof. Stephens, was down for two numbers, and his selection nothing better of late. His selection "The Sea Hymn" is a gem. It was heartily applauded for its work.

This is Cinderella day at the Theater, and two performances will be given of the localized opera, one at 8 o'clock and the other at 8:15. The popularity of the people engaged, and the wide advertising of the show, recovered, are relied on to fill the house.

At the Grand last night Mason & Hand had an old time reception at the hands of their friends. They have appeared in Salt Lake on a good many occasions, and every one knew what to expect when the curtain rose on "Rudolph and the Show." The show is as merry, hearty and enjoyable as ever it was, and the company the comedians bring with them, lends good aid in keeping the merriment up to the highest point. Besides the two shows in the part of the twins, those deserving special mention are Charles H. Bates and Beatrice McKenzie, whose dates were especially good. The same bill runs tonight and tomorrow afternoon and evening, and is well worth seeing.

The Novelty Theater on West Second South presents an entire change of bill each week and is doing a good business, the leading feature being the team of Rice & Lucas.

"The Bonnie Brier Bush" will run all next week at the Theater, and the advance manager, J. J. Higgins, is here to look after the advertising.

The advance sale opens today for the Jefferson De Angelis engagement at the Theater, which begins Friday.

"Uncle Josh Spruce" holds the boards at the Grand Thursday.

HIS CONDITION CRITICAL.

Bishop Leonard Still Very Low but Physicians Hope for Recovery.

Bishop Leonard continues very low, but his physicians have by no means given up hopes for his ultimate recovery. The bishop has been a hard worker and a great traveler, and the constant changes incidental to travel in all sorts of communities and under varying conditions involving hardship and discomfort, and exposure to constant changes of altitude and climate, finally brought him into a physical condition that made him susceptible to intestinal disease when brought in contact with it. If Bishop Leonard recovers, he will have to largely curtail his traveling program, and rely more on the subordinate clergy.

The great special Christmas sale in the Basement Section is already a center of interest. So many of the articles are Christmas-giving things. Lace curtains, carpets, rugs, linoleum, pictures, couch covers, portieres, cut glass, Austrian china, bric-a-brac—Oh, thousands of tempting articles.
