'The truth is," said he, "De Lesseps had his ticket in the Panama lottery before the canal congress, and none in the Nicaragua enterprise. His advocacy of the Panama route proceeded from meney con-siderations wholly. The Panama canal, if practicable to construct, continued De Franco, would be like the Suez Canal, only useful to steam vessels, because it is in a region of calms, and sailing vessels would be delayed for weeks in reaching or leaving it. It would be folly to construct a canal for Depue MO steamers only, when there is a better route available for both sail and steam vessels, and when the great bulk of the world's commercial marine is in sailing ships. Franco further said: Grant would
