Mrs. Madeline Wallin Sikes, of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae, has compiled a table of statistics of compulsory education for every state. The leaflet will be brought up to date this fall, and released. The summary is both interesting and valuable to those concerned with the subject. There is a discrepancy in some States, between the child labor and the compulsory education laws which has resulted in an increase in juvenile crime, especially in cities. For instance, where the law requires children between the ages of 7 and 14 to attend school for 16 weeks during the year, and at the same time forbids children under 14 working for wages, it is possible for them to comply with the letter of the education law, and yet have a good part of a year to spend in idleness on the streets. They cannot be forced to go to school, and they are not allowed to work. Their situation is demoralizing in the extreme. A lengthening of the compulsory school term in cities seems to be the remedy most favored. In Illinois, where the subject has been much discussed in women's club, it has been recommended to lengthen the required term to 26 weeks, and a bill embodying this suggestion is to be presented to the Legislature this winter.
