is turning its attention lately to Utah, and there are many learned jurists in the east who are beginning to feel their profession degraded by the action of the Utah judiciary. One incident in particular educes much comment. A Utah Judge It is said has ruled that a husband on renouncing the principle f plural marriage can select the wife who is most pleasing to him. To a monogamic mind this is rather curious law. The first wife is usually regarded as the lawful one, and to her aione ought the husband be made to adhere. But according to the Utah judge, if she is old and feeble, the husband can discard her and take to a younger and more vigorous one. If the veterans, the G. A.
