Judson Harmon of Ohio, the local medal by Mayor Edward B. Burkhardt of Dayton.

After the presentation ceremony, the crowds witnessed a parade of floats representing the development of locomotion in America. This was headed by an Indian runner and, after the various stages from the ox cart to the automobile had been shown, was concluded by an aeroplone, with the suggestion that the next route for speed would be among the clouds. Although it was the second day of Dayton's homecoming celebration was crowded with events arranged in honor of the Wright brothers. The aeroplone, the Wright workshop preparing for flight to Washington, where they are to resume flights for the said next week. They hope to leave tomorrow, today, as the government's requirements are fulfilled it is expected they will sail for Germany to take up work for the German government.

James Allen, chief signal officer of the army, representing the secretary of war, the United States government, and the Wright brothers in their purchase of an aeroplone. He also spoke of the flights of Wilbur and Orville Wright, and said that the Wright brothers' machine was the most important contribution to the government's aeronautical appliances of this kind.

Orville and Wilbur Wright have by their industry and perseverance secured for the United States the United States in return has signally honored them by a joint resolution of its Congress and the presentation of these medals, designed by the secretary of war in compliance with that resolution and with the co-operation of the secretary of the treasury struck at the United States mint in Philadelphia."

"Within the past few months Mr. Wilbur Wright has made demonstrations in the presence of the king of England, the king of Spain and the king of Italy, and the ambassador of home has also flown as a passenger with Mr. Wright. HUNDRED TEAMS AT WORK REPAIRING DAM

President Francis M. Lyman Returns From Butner—Damage to Be Made Good.

President Francis M. Lyman returned from Butner this morning where he went when the news was first received of the bursting of the irrigation dam. He stated this morning that he attended a meeting of the farmers of the district last evening at which the proposition of the future was discussed.

The meeting was throughout of a friendly nature and as an outcome there will be a committee leave Salt Lake tomorrow to go over the situation on behalf of the Butner company and investigate the damage done pending a settlement. Work was started on repairing the dam this morning and every available man and team were pressed into requisition. It is believed that the break can be repaired enough so that water can be brought on the crops inside of 10 days or two weeks at the latest. If this is not accomplished, thousands of acres of grain will fail to mature.

The Deseret News correspondent at Butner under yesterday's date sends the following on the situation:

Yesterday and today have been interesting, exciting and important days in the history of the new town of Butner. The break in the large earth dam near by has brought to Butner an unusually large number of distinguished visitors. President Francis M. Lyman, really a product of Millard county is coming to be looked upon by everyone as the father of the county.

When the people here rejoice, he rejoices with them, and when they are in trouble, he is one of the first men on the scene to give assistance and encouragement to the people, therefore no one was surprised to see him arrive in town early this morning on the train from the north.

On the train the following also came: James A. Melville, for whom the big dam has been named; Thomas C. Callister of the state land board, and Joseph Jensen, engineering expert from the office of the state engineer. For the first time perhaps in the history of this place the "Limited" from the south stopped at the new depot with the chief engineer of the road, R. K. Brown, on board. Mr. Brown had come to assist in arriving at a definite line of action along which to proceed to repair the big dam.

Four carriages have been used to carry the experts and other officials over the ground that has been affected by the flood. Others in the party were the following: Frederick R. Lyman, president of the Melville Irrigation company; Charles Tyng, manager of the Irrigatory Irrigation company; Milton Moody, president of the Deseret Irrigation company; Frank L. Capen, manager of the Butner Irrigated Lands company; and Mr. Darrow, chief engineer of the Irrigated Lands company.

After a consultation the engineer of the party made a report according to which the dam is to be repaired and other damages are to be made right. All are united in the opinion that no effort should be spared to save the twenty-five-thousand acres of crops that must be a failure if the dam is not repaired in the immediate future. "Every man in this neighborhood," said President Lyman, "will be expected to go to work on the dam, and if any such are found not so employed, they will be fined." Mr. Lyman said less than 120 teams will be at work tomorrow, and in two weeks, if all goes well, the water will be in the canals again.

HOW SOCIETY AMUSES ITSELF

In Gould Case Witness Testified Hostess' Arm Was Bitten and Another Got a Black Eye.

MRS. GOULD FOUND IN CELLAR

Said She Drank Champagne Cocktails All Day, Was Loud and Boisterous and Snored Loudly.

New York, June 18.—The procession of servants and employees of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Gould to the witness stand continued today. One of the sensations of the trial developed just before the close of yesterday's proceedings in the testimony of Herbert Schmidt, the Gould's footman, from 1904 to 1905. Schmidt told the story on the witness stand of a gathering of several well-known New York women at which Mrs. Gould was present, in the apartments of Mrs. Underwood Kirkpatrick, when, according to Schmidt, the hostess' arm was bitten, another woman received a black eye and he found Mrs. Gould in the cellar of the house weeping.

Harry J. Veltch of Des Moines, Ia., was the first witness called to the stand by the defense today. He was employed as a valet by Mrs. Gould from December, 1905, to September, 1906, the witness said, and during that time traveled with her to the West Indies and Europe and attended her at the St. Regis hotel in this city and at Castle Gould.

Veltch testified that he had seen Mrs. Gould under the influence of liquor several times. He said she drank a great deal on the trip to the West Indies on the yacht Niagara, mostly champagne and Manhattan cocktails. The witness described an incident at Castle Gould in July or August, 1906, when he said Mrs. Gould drank champagne cocktails all day and became loud and boisterous and threatened to "fire everybody in the place."

She asked me to tie her slippers, and when I started to do it she kicked them off in the air," said the former valet.

"She was staggering about then but ordered one or two more cocktails," continued the witness, "and later in the evening I passed her room and the door was open. She was lying on the bed fully dressed sound asleep and snoring loudly."

MRS. GOULD ANGERED AT STORY.

Mrs. Gould eyed the witness sharply all the time he was testifying. She appeared to be much angered by his evidence.

THREW TABLE DOWN.

The witness repeated a statement that Mrs. Gould had ordered him to throw a table, set with dishes, into the hall from her apartment at the St. Regis.

Veltch said Mrs. Gould stood in the door of her apartment watching him, and expressed her approval when he threw the table into the main corridor of the fifth floor, where the rooms were located, smashing the dishes and making a great racket.

Henry H. Knowles, an insurance agent, testified that he had known the Goulds since 1904, and had visited at Castle Gould and Blue Gap farm, and been a guest on the Gould yacht Niagara.

"Did you have occasion to observe Mrs. Gould's conduct after she had been drinking?" asked Mr. Nicoll.

"Yes, the first time was a dinner at the St. Regis, in 1905," said Mr. Knowles. "Mrs. Gould drank a good deal of wine and became very disagreeable."

"How did her mood change at these times?" asked Mr. Nicoll.

"She would change from a most charming and agreeable woman to a disagreeable woman, nagging and sarcastic," said the witness.

He said Mr. Gould left the table at one dinner on account of his wife's talk and conduct. At another dinner at Castle Gould in July, 1906, the witness said, Mrs. Gould found fault with the salad because the lettuce was not properly headed, and she slapped her husband because better arrangements had not been made.

"That's what you get for having a d— fool gardener," Mrs. Gould said to Mr. Gould, the witness testified.

A public reception followed for Bishop and Mrs. Brewster, and the visiting prelates.
