

WORKMAN FALLS TO QUICK DEATH

John Hagans, Ironworker, Breaks
His Neck This Morning at
Z. C. M. I. Building.

CAUSE OF ACCIDENT UNKNOWN

Was a Skilled Workman and Companion Cannot Explain the Man's Fall.

Falling from the fourth floor of the new extension of the Z. C. M. I. on South Temple street at 10:40 o'clock this morning, John Hagans, a structural iron worker, was precipitated 40 feet to the basement of his head striking against an unframed wall. His neck was broken and his head crushed, death being instantaneous.

Hagans was working on the south-west corner of the building in company with A. S. Munro. He was standing on a beam while the derrick was swinging a column to him. In some way he lost his balance, fell backward and made an interrupted descent of fully 40 feet. Twenty workmen saw the terrible fall at the cry of Munro. The body flung out in the air and the bones crunched when the head and body came in contact with the basement wall.

Follow workers hurried to the body, but there was no discernible trace of life. Medical aid, hurriedly summoned, proved of no avail, and the remains were taken to the S. M. Taylor undertaking rooms, 241 east First South.

ACCIDENT NOT EXPLAINED.

The dead man was about 30 years old, unmarried, and lived at 206 west Second and South. His home is in Ft. Collins, Colo. He has been in Salt Lake for about six months, working for A. and J. McDonald, contractors, who are erecting the building on which Hagans met his death. The dead man has worked in Salt Lake at various times during the past five years and bore an excellent reputation generally.

A. S. Munro, who was working with Hagans at the time of the accident, said that he could not understand just how it could have happened. "I was at one end of the column," he said, "and swung it over to Jack. He reached for it and I looked down for just a second to watch my footing. I heard a cry and when I looked for Jack I saw him going over backward. The column was still swinging in the air and everything seemed to be going smoothly with the derrick. I can't understand it. For Jack was a careful and skilled workman."

John McDonald of the contracting firm was equally at a loss to account for the loss of life. "Every equipment on the building is perfect," he said, "and we have been going along day by day without a hitch. I cannot imagine how the accident occurred unless Hagans got careless in some way. Some of the men get so accustomed to walking about in the air that they at times do not take precautions. He was a good man, intelligent, sober, and industrious. He has worked for me at different times and I would not want a better man."

BRONZE STATUES PLACED.

Figures of the Prophet and Hyrum Smith Adorn Temple Doors.

The niches at the sides of the east doors of the Salt Lake temple are now occupied by statues of the Prophet Joseph Smith and Hyrum Smith, his brother, who were martyred at Carthage, June 27, 1844. The statues are considered to be excellent likenesses by those who have seen them. They are life size and executed in bronze. Each statue stands on a pedestal about 2 feet square and 6 inches thick, and the pose of each of them recalls the characteristics of the original probably as far as it is possible for a statue to do so. In Hyrum Smith's position, with his hands crossed on the head of an old-fashioned cane, is depicted calmness and serenity, while the Prophet Joseph Smith's pose, with his hands extended in front of him clasping a Book of Mormon and his head erect, indicates the dauntless courage of the man. Joseph's statue is in the niche at the southeast door and Hyrum's statue occupies the niche at the side of the northeast door. Both statues are from models by Mahonri Young, the well known Utah sculptor.

GUY FAWKES DAY.

Today Remembered as the Anniversary of the Famous Plot.

"Remember, remember the 5th of November," is the introductory line to the stanzas calling attention of English-speaking peoples to the interesting fact that this is Guy Fawkes day, the day to be remembered date, Nov. 5, 1605, when this estimable patriot was discovered about to translate the entire English parliament, king, cabinet and all, to a higher and nobler sphere of action, where wings rather than street cars or balloons are methods of locomotion, and where the ever recurring terrestrial problem of "How are we going to eat?" never troubles anybody.

Fawkes was a native of Yorkshire; served with the Spanish army in the Netherlands, and became a religious fanatic of the deepest madman shade. His views of life were thereby rendered unstable and prismatic. He entered into a plot with several of his co-conspirators to give England a thorough politi-

SLOWTOWN WAITED HUGH JENNINGS

Philippines Wanted Him for Team in 1910
But Detroit Did Not Want To Lose Him.

(Special Correspondence.)

Philadelphia, Nov. 3.—With the signing of Jennings to again manage the Detroit team goes the last vestige of hope that this hustling leader would come to Philadelphia. This is to be regretted, for without doubt Jennings could repeat with the Phillies what he did with the Tigers. It will be remembered that before Jennings took charge of the Tigers they were a great but unharmonious aggregation of individual players that collectively amounted to little and out but a small figure in the championship race.

The material for a pennant-winning team was there, but it required an astute manager to get the best results. The scrappy ex-Baltimorean proved just the man for the place. He looked out the differences between the players, molded the material into a concrete whole and drilled his men into sinking individual glory for the benefit of the team. It was the Tigers' almost perfect team work, the subordination of self in the effort to win and the tireless fighting spirit the manager injected into the men that landed Detroit three times winners of the American league pennant more than the inherent strength of the team.

What Jennings did for Detroit some one can do for the Phillies. The material is there, and it only requires somebody to bring out its latent strength. The man for the place must be a both leader, have the entire confidence of his players besides a thorough knowledge of up-to-date baseball. Unfortunately such men are rare, indeed, and are generally tied up with contracts to clubs that have a thorough appreciation of their worth.

Naturally with Jennings eliminated from the field, rumors prevail to Donlin, and there are not a few who believe that he may yet succeed Manager Murray. Perhaps New York would release Donlin without the Phillies giving up Magee or any other player, but it is to be doubted whether he would be the man needed.

WOULD ADD SCRAPPINENESS.

There is no denying that Donlin would add the needed touch of scrappiness to the Phillies, but unless he could arrange his personal contacts he would be of little use to the team, because when most wanted the theatrical stage, would be at its height. At present there does not appear to be any desirable manager in sight, and as Murray has an ironclad contract with two years to run there may be no change, unless some mutually satisfactory arrangement can be made to buy him off. What the Phillies need is a player-manager, a man who not only can tell the players what to do, but go in and show them. Such a one is Fred Clarke, Pittsburgh's brilliant leader, but, unfortunately, there are only too few Clarkes. Many think that "Kid" Gleason would make a successful manager. He has been in the game long enough to thoroughly understand it at every angle, and he is universally liked by all players. It is no secret that Gleason is Murray's right-hand man, and much of what success the Phillies have had has been due to his efforts.

JAW BROKEN ON BOTH SIDES.

S. J. Foulger in Precarious Condition
After Hoodlum Attack.

Charged with attacking and seriously beating S. J. Foulger in west Second South street Monday evening, Simon Levin, Abe Miller, Mike Shosmaker and Frank Smith were arrested Thursday evening by Detectives Schulze and Whelling.

Foulger had his jaw broken on both sides and was removed to the Groves L. D. S. hospital and was on the operating table for four hours. His condition is most serious and he may have to undergo another operation.

Foulger is 25 years of age and is employed at Walker Bros. store. He was on his way home Monday evening accompanied by his brother when the attack was made upon him because he refused to purchase a Sunday Denver Post. The publication, it is charged, sent a number of roughhouse hoodlums here to sell the paper which is called the Sunday Denver Post but which arrives here on Friday. It is claimed that because Foulger declined to buy a paper he was set upon and unmercifully beaten by the ruffians. The injured man was able to give a description of his assailants and they were rounded up Thursday evening by the police.

TYPHOID EPIDEMIC OVER.

October Bulletin of City Board of Health on Local Conditions.

The typhoid epidemic is over, according to the monthly report of the city board of health for October. It states that most of the 85 cases of typhoid fever reported during the last month have been cured. Of the 17 cases reported in October, 4 were males, 13 females, 11 diphtheria, 1 pneumonia, 20 chicken pox and 2 whooping cough. Dr. Stork favored the gentle sex during October, as there were 81 girls of girls reported and 81 of boys. 457 loads of garbage at the crematorium and 65 horses and 6 cows were destroyed. The food inspector condemned 667 pounds of meat and 13 pounds of other food products, and prosecuted 11 violators of the law. The meat inspector for inspected 1,309 cattle, 3,420 sheep, 109 pigs and 113 calves. He condemned 4 beef, 4 sheep, 11 hogs and 21 parts of carcasses. He has laid 4 cases and 19 hogs for further inspection.
