

CONFERENCE IN SESSION TODAY

Meeting of the General Primary Association of the Church.

IN THE FOURTEENTH WARD.

President Louie B. Felt Presided and Made an Address of Welcome To Those Present.

The General Primary association of the Church held the first session of its conference in the Fourteenth ward assembly room, beginning at 10 a. m. today, President Louie B. Felt presiding. She extended a welcome to the officers and members present, and spoke in part as follows:

Love was the watchword of Primary workers, and this influence extends from the general board to the stake boards, and then to the local workers, whose duty it was to labor with the children. The reports from the stakes indicated a steady progress and growth in Primary work. Since the last conference some changes had taken place in the general board. Owing to sickness, Mrs. Lillie T. Felt had been released from her position as first counselor, but was retained as an honorary member of the board. Mrs. Josephine R. West had also been released from the position of second counselor on account of absence from the state, but she also is retained as an honorary member. Miss May Anderson and Mrs. Clara W. Beebe had been chosen to fill these positions. Mrs. Olive D. Christensen was appointed to succeed Miss Anderson as general secretary.

RECORD KEEPING.

The secretary, Mrs. Olive D. Christensen, gave instructions on record keeping and reports and submitted the following hints in relation thereto:

Definition—An official statement of facts, particularly a written statement. Use of Reports—To aid general board in ascertaining the condition of associations, and to keep stake board in touch with local associations.

What Reports Show—Enrollment, average attendance, number of different meetings held, entertainments, fair, etc., whether associations are graded or not; libraries, books number of subscriptions to "Children's Friend," financial condition.

Need for Correctness of Reports—Of use only so far as correct, as it is a statement of facts.

Average Attendance—Large enrollment does not necessarily mean the most successful association; it means large enough for enrollment; but average attendance shows how many have attended after enrollment. How to increase enrollment is a question to be considered; enrollment of report shows that the increasing of enrollment has been considered.

Financial Report—Improved since last report. Nickel fund, 12 associations paid 100 per cent.

Negligence in making financial report means actual money amount on hand and the difference between sum of money on hand and report and that received, and the sum of disbursements. Reports should be approved by president.

PROF. EVAN STEPHENS.

On the subject of music in the associations, Prof. Evan Stephens said in part:

Singing should be a living, practical part of our exercises. We get into a sing and sing over and over anything in any way, and sing without sentimentality; sing cheerfully. Our Gospel is the Gospel of cheer, and should be encouraged in our singing.

The song book that has been prepared for Primary associations is in some respects ideal, and the selections in it are suitable to children's voices. The part music, and do not keep the children singing the same part all the time. Boys and girls should sing both parts. Use the book to learn the songs, but sing without them.

Professor Stephens concluded a very interesting talk by illustrating some of the songs from the Primary song book.

UP FROM MEXICO.

Bishop and Mrs. Wm. Derby Johnson, Jr., with their daughter Jennie and Perla of Colonia Diaz, Mexico, arrived over the D. & R. G. this morning to attend the D. & R. G. conference, and also to attend the marriages of their daughter, Miss Jennie Johnson and Joseph H. Parry, Jr., who lately returned from the Mexican mission. The marriages will take place some time this month. A host of friends, both here and in Mexico, will wish the young people a happy journey through life.

Bishop Johnson reports conditions in the Mexican colonies as fair, and the prospects most encouraging in a financial way.

erage member of the United Commercial Travelers' association like a globe. Life is made the brighter by his joy. His unending good nature in the face of difficulties and discouragements and hard work and keen competition and absence from home has fitted him with the "voice of good fellows," and you ever hear of an ill-natured traveling man?

How long do you think such an individual if one could be imagined, would hold his job? How many sales would he make? How many would he imagine could go so far as to compare up so absurd an image, he would be immediately classed with strange growths and monstrosities. He would feel about as much at home in a gathering of typical commercial travelers as the death's head at a feast. Life is serious and sad enough, even with the light of joy and hopefulness shed on its path by traveling men and their kind. We acknowledge freely and gratefully the good cheer you gentlemen spread abroad, when you spread life with gaiety, enlighten with smiles and cheerful words the prosy business office and set the table in a row with your jokes and witticisms. But not only did a source for your own care and distractions, but you shower happiness upon those who otherwise sink under the load of care and responsibility.

"Laughter has cured more ills than medicine or surgery. No one has contributed more of the genuine kind of laughter and joyousness than the typical traveling man and the best of it is he doesn't charge the regular doctor's fee for his treatment."

"But you gentlemen not only scatter good cheer. You benefit communities by providing them with comforts and commodities, which they might not have enjoyed for years but for scientific salesmanship. How many lightning rods would there be on the houses, or how many planes in them or how many strikes of lightning in the country stores or how many of the really best staple articles on the merchant's shelves, if it were not for the work of you genial and persistent traveling men? I shudder to think of the cheerless homes and antiquated looking streets, the absence of talking machines—nothing personal intended. I refer to graphophones, that would stare us in the face if the commercial traveler should go out of business. Commerce is one of the best means of spreading civilization and its benefits, and it would take a large proportion of its beneficial civilizing work were it not for the commercial traveler. As a factor in our prosperity and civilization he cannot possibly be dispensed with."

"Therefore I take pleasure in welcoming on behalf of the State this gathering of commercial travelers. They are the advance guard of joy and comfort and happiness. Blessings follow in their wake. The greetings and good cheer of the state are extended to them. May you gentlemen feel as much at home in our midst as you do in the hotel lobby or the merchant's presence or in the bosom of your family."

"I am glad that you are holding this convention in one of the best States in the Union. I am pleased that you are meeting in one of the most hospitable and progressive cities of the State. I am sure that during your stay here you will be convinced by observation of the fact that we who live in Utah have long known and are proud of the fact that Utah is a splendid State for convention work, and there is no city better adapted to it than Ogden. Gentlemen you are most cordially welcome."

EVENTFUL YEAR FOR LIBRARY.

Even in New Building More Book Room is a Problem to be Solved.

VOLUMES NUMBER 25,479.

Statistics Show That About Sixty Per Cent of Calls Are for Books Of Fiction.

The city librarian, Miss Joanna H. Sprague, presented her annual report at this week's regular meeting of the public library board, which accepted the report and ordered it filed. Miss Sprague's report covers the year ending May 31 last, and says: "The past year has been an eventful one for the library. We moved last September, from the city and county building to the beautiful new library building erected and donated to the city by Mr. John Q. Packard, and furnished by means of the $2,000 appropriated by the city for that purpose. With our three large reading rooms and handsome lecture hall, in addition to the children's room, we have ample space for the accommodation of the public, but the need of additional book room is a problem that must be met in some way in the comparatively near future."

OPEN SHELF SYSTEM. "The open shelf system, which was introduced in the new building, has proved an unqualified success from some points of view. The patrons of the library are most enthusiastic over it, and the decided increase in the circulation of the non-fiction classes of literature seems due almost entirely to the free access of the patrons to the books. On the other hand, our losses are, and probably always will be, larger under this system. It is simply a question of whether the loss is counterbalanced by the additional pleasure and profit enjoyed by the public. Our circulation has been steadily growing through the year, as is shown by the fact that 633 more books were given for loan, reading this year than last, notwithstanding the closing of the library for a month while moving. The children's department has contributed its full share to this increase."

INCREASING MEMBERSHIP.

"During the latter part of the year, there has been a registration of the library patrons, and we are now able to report a live membership of 4,266 registered since Jan. 1, besides 157 'Teacher's Cards,' issued to the teachers in the public schools, and giving them special privileges to aid them in reform work. Of these, the larger proportion are from the central and southern, has the smallest representation, has the smallest representation. If the funds of the library will permit, I would recommend during the coming year the placing in two or three of the public schools in the districts small collections of books to be changed from time to time. This might serve to introduce the library in these parts of the city where it is not now used, and it is quite in the line of the work done in the ordinary public library in a city of our population."

25,479 VOLUMES.

Attached to this report is a classified enumeration of the books owned by the library, with statistics of membership, circulation, fines, and statistical tables show the number of volumes in the library June 1, 1935, to have been 25,479. The number of volumes acquired during the year was 3,671; number of volumes lost during the year, 1,041, which 237 were discarded as worn out or condemned. The number of volumes in the library June 1, 1936, was 28,108. The reference department includes 6,303 volumes, of which 518 are old and rare books, and bound periodicals number 2,497 volumes. The circulating department includes 21,601 volumes of which 6,445 are fiction, and 39 only are bibliographical. The juvenile list contains 2,484 volumes. The unbound periodicals number 1,624. There are 17 maps. Re-registration of membership cards since Jan. 1, 4,266; books loaned for home use, 115,297; books loaned in reading rooms, 41,865; total visitors, estimated, 212,874 with daily visitors at 643; days open 328.

Mr. Thomas is chairman of the senior reception committee at commencement exercises.

UTAH UNIVERSITY ENTUSIASM.

Manifest in Large Measure at Theater Commencement Last Night.

Largest Gathering of Its Kind in History of the Institution—Impressive Exercises.

The thirty-seventh annual commencement of the University of Utah, held last night in the Salt Lake theater, spoke volumes for the rapid growth of the institution for the past year. The line of graduates which marched down the aisle to their reserved seats was more than double that of any previous commencement, and the speeches from members of the regents, graduating classes, and faculty showed a loyalty to the school that is more pronounced than formerly and a determination to make it the greatest educational institution in the greater west that has been a reality, with Salt Lake as its center.

The aggressive interest in the University that is becoming manifest on all sides, required last night in a demand for seats that far exceeded the capacity of the theater. There was not a vacant chair in the house, and standing room was hard to find on the lower floors, while the stage was thronged with prominent men of the state and city who are glad now to be known among the staunch supporters of the greater University.

IMPRESSIVE PROCESSION.

The exercises began with an impressive procession of graduates. To the strains of music from the orchestra, under Arthur Shepherd, the 150 normal and college graduates filed across the stage and down improvised stairs to the front seats of the parquet. After their appearance, following the beautiful procession had died down, Rev. Frank Pay Eddy opened the services with prayer. Miss Edna Evans, representing the Normal class, then read an essay in which she made a plea for the production of music into the school curriculum. She was prominently. She held that music was a power for good in the correct development of a young person, and declared that if young people were educated in a musical way, they would not grow up to seek cheap vaudeville entertainments while sympathy concertos are allowed to lapse for lack of support.

ETERNAL JUSTICE.

The theme of Daniel Alexander, orator for the college graduating class, was "Justice." In it he traced the history of the world, showing how the principle had flourished in each era, and more, until now it more completely governs the world than at any other time.

Still, he held there are cases of injustice in our political life. "In this city," he declared, "as well as in every other community, there exist flagrant cases of injustice, the result of a political system. When our present city administration was in power there was a general house cleaning, just as there has been by every party that preceded the present in power. Even the police and fire departments felt the force of change. It takes years to make a good police force, and a good fireman, but our politicians are willing to sacrifice the good of society for the furthering of their own party interests. All political parties move along parallel paths and today what the other party did yesterday. Why should not the citizens of Salt Lake stand upon their rights and demand that the city and not party politics be the test of impeachment?"

NELSON WELCOMES GRADUATES.

State Sup't. of Public Instruction A. C. Nelson welcomed the normal graduates into the great profession of teachers. He spoke briefly of the nobility of the calling of a teacher, and declared that the final test of just as in the true teacher was the ability to mould character.

COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS.

Judge William H. King delivered the commencement address to the college graduates, holding out to them that the development of modern civilization brings an era when men shall not go forth in vain in conquest, nor to live and let live, but to live and help live.

BOARD OF REGENTS.

Frank Pierce spoke for the board of regents, congratulating the school on its present condition of prosperity, and declaring that there ought to be here in the center of such a great mining and smelting region, a great mining school, and in the center of such a great area of population, a great arts and science school. The making of the greater University of Utah, he held, therefore, was only a question of a very few years, and already the mining school was the best in America if not the best in the world.

GOVERNOR CONGRATULATES.

Gov. Cutler spoke briefly, congratulating the graduates upon the completion of their required course. The services closed with benediction by Henry B. Prout.

MOVE BY C. B. & Q.

Will Absorb the Quincy, Omaha & Kansas City July 1.

Kansas City, June 7.—The Journal will say tomorrow on a new through train from Salt Lake to Marysville, Idaho. The decision arrived at was that this train would be placed in commission on Sunday, June 17. It is to leave Salt Lake in the evening at a time yet to be named, but in all probability 7 p. m., and will arrive at the present terminus of the Yellowstone Park railroad before 7 o'clock the next morning.

While this train is being put on for the special benefit of the Yellowstone Park tourists, it will, as a great boon to residents of Ogden, Brigham City, Pocatello, Idaho Falls, St. Anthony and intermediate points. Returning it will leave Marysville in the evening and arrive in Salt Lake early the next morning. This train undoubtedly will become popular with weekend fishermen, as it runs right into one of the best trout districts of Idaho.

First-class equipment, including standard sleepers, will be in order. Despite the prevailing chilly weather, people are going into Yellowstone Park daily over the new route. On this morning's train there were no less than 15 passengers booked for a week's trip through the park.

In addition, the operating and passenger departments have decided to maintain the new train to Park City, which was put on some time ago, in the nature of an experiment. This will mean that when the new time card is issued, there will be two more daily trains in and out of Salt Lake over the Oregon Short Line appearing on it.

VACATION FOR DERRAH.

Failing to Secure it Miss Tucker Roundly Scores Offenders.

A MOST DISGRACEFUL SCENE.

Hoodlums Indulge in Nasty Demonstrations During Rendition of "East Lynne" at Grand.

The audience that attended the Grand theater last evening witnessed a scene that brought a blush of shame to the face of every self-respecting person in the house—shame that Salt Lake should furnish such a band of rowdies and ruffians as disgraced themselves and humiliated every man and woman present, other than themselves.

"East Lynne" was being presented by the Ethel Tucker stock company, and it was in the midst of the scene where in Barbara Hare pays a professional visit to Mr. Carly that the noise in the upper gallery began to become intolerable. Mr. Brandon hesitated in his lines, and then advancing to the footlights, asked in courteous tones that the disturbance cease. The clamor increased rather than being subdued, and by threatened to have the offenders ejected. For a time better order prevailed, but frequently throughout the evening the confusion was kept up. Finally, in the last act, during the death scene, when Isabel and her former husband meet for the last time, and when the audience was much affected, the hoodlums renewed their noisy disturbances and a most disgraceful scene followed.

MISS TUCKER'S APPEAL.

Unable longer to restrain herself, Miss Tucker arose and advanced to the footlights. In the portion of the house where respectable people sat scarcely a person breathed, so keen was the anticipation of what she would say. Miss Tucker, in feeling words, spoke of the pleasure her Salt Lake engagement had afforded her, and deprecated the fact that such a distressing moment had arrived. The disturbers refused to listen, and tried to drown the fair actress's voice, and it was then that there was witnessed a scene upon the stage that was not acting, it was a genuine outburst of emotion and dramatic effect that no acting could depict.

SCORES OFFENDERS.

"People who will take advantage of dark places to exhibit their youth and heathenish natures, are fit only to be called 'things,'" declared Miss Tucker. She said that were it not for consideration for the majority of the community, she would have rung down for the good of the city, and the lights be turned on, and as the rendezvous of the hoodlums, young men and women, blazed in the full light, she told them what she thought of such conduct. In respect to the portion of the audience was mortified by the expression, and the people on the stage given every demonstration that the great majority of the audience was with them in sympathetic endorsement. Amid a peal of laughter, the enactment of the death scene was resumed, and the humiliated audience fled out with wonderment in its mind as to how Miss Tucker and Mr. Brandon could so admirably have finished the play, the circumstances considered, and all words of condemnation for the creatures who had been the occasion of the unpleasant occurrence.

SHOULD CALL POLICE.

The event was wholly without justification, as the play was well given. As often as it has been seen in Salt Lake it is doubtful if ever any popular presentation of the play has been so well presented as this better than the one that was so interfered with last night by a crowd of young hoodlums who appeared to have attended for no other purpose than creating a disturbance, and "having a time." What patrons of the house still wonder at is why the management did not call the police and have the offenders escorted to the city jail, where they could have had more congenial company. Altogether it was a most shameful and regrettable incident, the most unpleasant of the kind that ever occurred in the city. It is manifest that a reputation of such offenses cannot but injure the business and standing of the house. The management has been giving a good run of popular prices, and already it is its duty to protect its patrons in the enjoyment of them, even at the expense of calling on the police, if necessary. There should be no repetition of last night's disgraceful scene.

train was proceeding at a slow rate of speed the wheels of the tender climbed the rails. Immediately afterwards the cars behind with the exception of the last one, followed suit and slowly turned over on their sides. The passengers all got a good shake up, but, strange to say, none was hurt beyond receiving a few bruises. A wrecking outfit from Cheyenne cleared the tracks but as the track of the mail car had been smashed it was necessary to transfer the mail.

WESTERN PACIFIC COUP.

Gould Road Solves Difficulty of Reaching Tidewater at Oakland.

The very latest story from Oakland is to the effect that the Western Pacific has purchased the controlling interest in the Key Route of electric cars operating between Oakland, Berkeley and San Francisco. It is understood in Oakland that the Southern Pacific, knowing anything about it, the Western Pacific has secured the majority of the stock in the Key Route which belonged to the Realty Syndicate, and that it has thus practically solved the difficulty of reaching tide water at Oakland, notwithstanding the injunctions of the federal courts. To fully understand the importance of this move it must be understood that the Key Route, as it is called, already has a long wharf that extends well to the harbor, and which is much nearer the San Francisco shore than the long mole of the Southern Pacific. The Realty Syndicate also owns a large water front, and lately started to rebuild wharves and erect bunkers so that Oakland would be able to handle trans-Pacific business. If then, the rumor be true, the Western Pacific has a very much better water front that it was seeking to secure, and more than that, it has direct communication with Berkeley and Oakland, because the cars of the Key Route now run to Twenty-second street, Oakland, only five blocks from the postoffice. Passengers by the Western Pacific can reach San Francisco much more rapidly than by the Southern Pacific, and more than that, the line is cleaner and much more comfortable than the Southern Pacific accommodations.
