M. S. Woolley testified—I acted a one of the judges of election at the same roll with the def ndant. When he came in the morning, Allen arranged to have the voting done through a window. I opposed, but he carried his point. Before the polls were opened, Mr. Bail folded a lot of Liberal ballots and placed them in envelopes. These ballots were placed on the table by the ballot boxes, and during the day I observed that he frequently handled these tickets. Whenever he went out for a moment he placed a book over the ballot box, and no tickets were placed in the box except by I was notified in the morning him. to look out for crooked work, but my time was so taken up that I could not watch Allen much of the time.

One witness, named Thornburg, testified that he was not a "Mormou," but had voted the People's ticket; he handed his ballot to Allen, who took it in his left hand, while holding another hallot in while holding another hallot in his right hand; witness turned his eyes in another direction for an instant, and then saw Allen deposit in the box the ballot he had in his right hand. Witness afterwards went to O. W. Powers and R. D. Winters and told them that his ballot was not put in the lox ballot was not put in the box.

Mr. Moyle stated that several witnesses who had been subpœnaed had failed to appear, and he therefore asked that the examination be continued until Aug. 30 at 10 o'clock, and that attachments be issued for voted for.

George White testified that he granted and the court then advoted at the school election, but the journed.

At about half-past ten Saturday, August 30th, the case was re-sumed. The prosecution placed prosecution placed sumed. a number of witnesses on the stand who testified that they voted the People's ticket. The cross-examination was confined to asking each witness if he examined his ballot before voting.

It was proven that there were 282 ballots in the box, and only 279 names on the poll list. One name on the latter, that of George Open-shaw, was marked "voted," where-as he did not vote. Thus there were four more ballots in the ballot box than the poll list showed had been cast.

The prosecution rested, and Mr. Ferguson filed a motion to dismiss the complaint on the ground that the prosecution had failed to make out a case. The motion was argued at considerable length, Mr. Moyle making an excellent speech in opposition to it. It was overruled, and the introduction of evidence for the defense was begun.

H. B. McCallum was the first witness. He testified to having visited the poll at which the defendant officiated as an election judge; that there were six or seven People's Party voters in the room where the election judges and chal-lengers were; that they stood around the table upon which was the ballot box, and were there in violation of the rule established by the Utah Commission.

The witness described in detail the interior of the room, etc., but no fact of any importance bearing on the case was eligited on the direct examination.

Cross-examined:

I knew Allen in Leadville. . He was a policeman there several years; he was not prosecuted in Leadville or Denver, to my knowledge, for any election fraud; he has been in this city about a year; has been tending bar; don't know of his having engaged in dealing cards. In three precincts piles of ballots lay on the table beside the ballot box; the election judges would hand out ballots to voters.

Prior to the day of election a "Liberal" ticket was sent to each People's Party voter, but no "Liberal" tickets were sent to "Liberal" voters until the day of election.

At the close of McCallum's testimony, at the request of Mr. Ferguson, the case was continued until 2 p. m. Tuesday, September 2nd.
