EDITORIAL NOTES.

At Wilkesbarre, Pa., the meanest man has turned up. His name is Gustav Schmaltz. Having quarreled with Fred Schrader, Schmaltz invited him to his house to bury the hatchet. After apologies had been made on both sides the two men embraced and klssed. But it was a knife instead of a hatchet that Schmaltz wished to bury, and did bury. in Schrader as they stood embracing.

A worthless brute named John Bonner, who lives near Rockville, Indiana, locked his wife out of the house because she would not give him money with which to buy liquor. In the narrow shed in which she and her children took refuge, her clothing came in contact with a fire and she was burned to death. In regard to this case the Chicago News remarks: "We have not heard that Mr. Bonner has been arrested, but if the poor fellow is plning in jall, some of our sympathetic ladies who like to do such things should hasten to take bouquets and congratulations to him in his loneliness. They should lose no time, for it is barely possible some of those reckless hoosiers may drape a forest tree with his remains.
