hours every day. "But," said the lawyer, with great show of sorrow, "I wouldn't allow that boy to play in Chicago, and now he has gone to the slums of New York."

Humors

Come to the surface in the spring as in no other season. It's a pity they don't run themselves all off that way!

WOMAN'S WORLD.

The piercing of the ears in order to hang ornaments in those mutilated members is gradually becoming a custom.

Some pretty rush-bottom chairs for country houses are shown. These chairs are especially good for hotel rooms. They are exact reproductions of old-time pieces, even to the crudely painted fruit and flower designs on the backs.

For the black hat, which is an indispensable part of the wardrobe of busy women, nothing is more satisfactory than the horsehair braid. It is more substantial than tulle and quite as becoming. Transparent black is better suited to most faces than solid black. A lovely model in a black hat was of this transparent and pliable braid. It was a big sweeping shape, the brim turned up slightly on one side and dipping a little in the front.

Very dashing are the black and colored tulle hats on braid foundation. The shapes approximate to the small, short-back sailor, and the tulle is put on in huge ruffles and ruffles. A picture hat in black transparent braid had a Tam O'Shanter crown and a wide, flexible brim for a wonder, not tucked up anywhere, but allowed to droop around the face like a child's hat. The trimming was rose wreaths, plush pink and white, part of the wreath appearing in the underbrim, against the hair and the rest encircling the crown. A very large black aigrette trimmed the front of the hat.

The new Charlotte Carday is a very picturesque when well developed. Its popularity during the winter has not caused people to tire of it, and young and old women are wearing it. Lace collars, embroidery and other light materials are used, and small flowers or ribbons go into the decorations.

Any woman who is perfectly healthy, persistently cheerful, sanely self-confident and enduring femininity will possess plenty of magnetism. Add to this a little beauty, a dash of cleverness and a knowledge how to dress and she will be irresistible. At any rate, the cultivation of magnetism is a great deal more worth while than the cultivation of a complexion.

Solid wreaths of roses trim many of the new hats. A burnt straw in light, flexible weave had the broad brim bent and twisted after the usual manner, and was built up in the back with several shades of red satin ribbon bows. The rather high crown was encircled at the top with a solid wreath of roses in shaded red tones. No foliage was mixed with the roses, but a mass of green rose leaves was arranged below the wreath, quite concealing the rest of the crown.

"There are three things that prevent sleep: restless fatigue, mental disturbances from within.

"In nine cases out of ten it is the unwillingness to lie awake that keeps us awake. We wonder why we do not sleep. We toss and turn and wish we could sleep. We fret and fume, and worry, because we do not sleep. We think of all we have to do on the following day, and are oppressed with the thought that we cannot sleep. First, we try one experiment to see if it will not make us sleepy, and when it fails, we try another, and perhaps another. In each experiment we are watching to see if it will work. There are many things to do, any one of which may help us to sleep, but the watching to see if they will work keeps us awake.

"There are five things to remember to help rest an overworked brain: 1. A hearty indifference to wakefulness. 2. Concentration of the mind on simple things. 3. Relaxation of the body. 4. Gentle rhythmic breathing of fresh air. 5. Regular nourishment."
