EDUCATIONAL INTERESTS.

The Various Public, State, Denominational and Private Enterprises. Their Opening, Enrollment, Teaching Force, Buildings, Etc.

The public schools belong to the people, by whom they are supported, patronized and managed. There is not a taxpayer, householder or member of society that is not personally concerned in the system of public education, and affected by it. The theory of the state is that education is as valuable to all forms of business that exist as it is to the common schools. Hence the system of an nation freely offers to all classes a full share in its benefits, and demands in return contributions of material aid from all sources of gain. The manufacturer, railroads, banks, merchants, mechanics, artizans and many of persons are all asked to give of their possessions for the support of the schools.

In return for this act, the commonwealth aims to send into every form of business industry more skilful and efficient laborers; into every community more intelligent and cultivated citizens; and to make of all loyal and law abiding people. It may truly be said that there is no one person interest that appeals to the entire population of the Territory with a more imperative demand for a wise supervision, generous support, and judicious management, for there is not a home whose inmates are not affected by the public schools, more is not a church, Sabbath school, or benevolent enterprise that does not depend their power.

The public school has been called "the people's college," and not inappropriately. The great mass of citizens obtain their whole training and preparation from this source, and the highest scholars and most accomplished men and women laid the foundations of their greatness in these same schools. The aim of these schools is, and ever has been, to develop in the people the highest possible appreciation of citizenship in the Republic. To this end they teach the forms of a common business constitution—the science of government, history, literature, composition and declamation, wishing to unfold all in the shortest time and allow as many as possible into the more scientific and scientific branches of study, which develop a higher education and culture.

When the schools can show that they can take boys and girls as they come from the home, many of them to a crude state, and in them gradually, consecutively and equally for citizenship, so no other form does, then they will secure universal patronage.

Into the grades must become prominent of the idea that the school is primary and the home and the staff secondary. They must lay aside the theory that the great mission of the home is to provide parents to lay children whom all refer as the material on which the schools may experiment—the grist to run through the school mill. "The school was made for the children and not the children for the school." By losing this principle in mind, the culture and refinement of the race is not brought to bear on the greatest possible number of the future citizens of both sexes.

As the New commenced at the time, the schools of this city opened on Monday, Sept. 11th, with a very large attendance. Although the accommodations have been made for an increased number of pupils, the buildings yet seem inadequate, and more room will have to be provided in the near future. Such structures as the Lowell, Hamilton, Bancroft, the Fourteenth ward, Washington, etc., are models of comfort, beautiful in design, and in appointment knowledge. As will be seen by the subjoined report of the public schools many of the rooms are crowded to excess, but in a short time they will be properly relieved. In this report space will allow only a brief outline.

DENVER COLLEGE.

The Salt Lake Business College, of which N. B. Johnston, G. W. Cupp and J. W. Jennings are proprietors, entered upon its fifth year Sept. 5th. The term has opened auspiciously and the year promises to be a most prosperous one. The Enterprise of Secretary, which has come most thoroughly into the West with such great success, is in use. Students from Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, Nevada, Colorado and Oregon have attended, which is a fact which speaks for itself. Both day and evening sessions are held, and the institution is open to both sexes.

UTAH NORMAL.

The Utah Normal college opened on the 5th inst. in the Alta block, and preparations to upgrade the following classes, viz.: Teachers' course training, kindergarten, preparatory, commercial and stenographic. These special lines of work will be continued through the year, as others will be added as occasion demands.

The teachers' course consists of two years. The first year is designed to qualify teachers for success at work in the common or district schools. The second year's work is framed and has for its object the preparation of teachers for a more responsible and higher grade work. Those who complete this course in a satisfactory manner will be entitled to the degree of Bachelor of Pedagogy.

The kindergarten course is the best in its purpose. First, it serves as a most sound for the training of kindergartners. Second, it provides Froebelian instruction to little children under public school age. This branch of the college is in charge of Miss Jeanette Smith.

The commercial course is one of the most thorough and practical that can be devised. The system used is the Williams & Rogers.

The preparatory course begins with the first year of the common school course and ends one through the academic to the first year college. It embraces those studies usually taught in the best academies.

The Utah Conservatory of Music and Art is under the same general management as the normal, and is directed by Prof. C. F. Shayler. All branches of instrumental and vocal music are taught in this department.

The Art studio is presided over by Miss Emma Scott, late of the Toronto School of Art.
