THEATRICAL.—The compass of histrionic lity and the versatility displayed by Mis. on Saturday night, proved her, if her evious impersonations had failed to satisany of our theatre-goers who had seen to be an actress of the highest order. ber Mrs. Chillington was a very excellent ce of high comedy. Her Medea was a haracterization in which the intellectual casfully sustained by the passionate and hysianl, every phase of character in Medea wing seized as it were intuitively, and emolled with a fidelity to nature that left thing to be desired. We have no hestitaonin pronouncing her one of the finest acssesin her line that we have ever seen.
