new correspondence of any particular importance.

At a private meeting of the conservative members of the House of Commons to-day, Randolph Churcaill intimated his decision to support the leaders of the party.

The Tories are jubilant, as they consider the split in the party has ended the liberals. The liberals, however, expect soon to reopen. The meeting manimously agreed to oppose the franchise bill.

Daly was removed from Chester jall last night, and arrived at the Birmingham railway station this morning. The escort was astonished to find fifty frishmen at the platform, who proved to be invincibles disguised as laborers. A strong police guard prevented anyone approaching.

The Chair laid before the Senate the resolution offered by Van Wyck, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to withhold patents for land on the Fyshiup branch of the Northern Pacific Railway until Congress decides the question of the Ioriciture of such lands.

Ately.

Herbert Spencer says he will not visit Austraina, as his trip to Ame ica has injured his health too seriously to induce him to undertake the experi-question of the forfeiture of such lands.

The Senate ther took up the Indian appropriation bill, and Daws briefly recapitulated its provisions. The estimates for the year, he said, were $8,-466,809; the amount of the bill as it came from the House was $3,456,389; the amendments proposed amount to $757,413; total reported by the Senate for Indian service for the ensuing year, $6,243,802. This exceeds the Indian bill last year by $40,157. The chief element of increase, Daws said, was the amount for Indian schools.

The bill was considered by sections, and considerable progress was made without debate, except upon appropriations for education in Alaska. The Senate committee had reduced the amount from $15,000 allowed by the House, to $10,000. Hawley moved to make the amount

Plumb opposed the motion. He thought the education of the Indian was costing a deal too much. It was was costing a deal too much. It was merely spending money without any practical result. The churches were doing the work at much less than the government was paying. The education of the Indian should be of a practical character. It was no use trying to educate an Indian up to the idea that he was a prince of blood.

Plumb ridiculed the efforts of interested parties to influence Congress to appropriate money for schools in Alaska.

Congress defended the Instance and the Alaska.
Conger defended the Indians and the work of their education. It was a work, he said, in which many noble philanthropic man and women were engaged, and should be encouraged. He favored liberal appropriations for it.

The claims of Willis N. Arnold and Hiram Johnson and others, of Henderson, Tenn., for damages received in the Rebel raid of November, 1862, which have been pending many years, were first considered. The first were reported favorably from committee or reported favorably from committee on war claims; the others unfavorably. Arnold claims to have been a loyal cit-izen, and was damaged $6,000. The others were disloyal and were assessed for damages at the time. The money remaining after the paying the dam-ages was turned into the United States treasury, and these claimants ask that it be distributed pro rata among them. In the Reichstag to-day was debated the blil to rehew the special anti-Socialist law. Richter pronounced the law a failure, emphasizing the fact that it had not prevented an attempt to blow up the Nelderwald monument. Von Putnamy, Prussian Home Secretary, disagreed with Richter; that the occurrence, instead of being an argument against the prolongation of the law, was a reason for it. The law defended the secret police in their dealings with criminals. There were circumstances under which no governcumstances under which no govern-ment could do without secret police. If the unti-Socialist law had not been If the anti-Socialist law had not been passed, the omission would have been atomed for in torrents of blood. All States which do not possess such a law are being undermined by antagonistic ideas, the legitimate consequence of social democracy. The government did act fail to appreciate Dr. Windthorst's good intention, but they were not able to reconcile his views with the government's responsibility. with the government's responsibility. Bismarck also spoke in its defense. He referred to the motion which was made by Wigthorst in 1881, providing for the adoption of an international law re-garding the punishment of regicides, and the Chancellor then read a letter written by the Emperor on the occa-sion of the assassination of the Czar Alexander, showing the Emperor had proposed such a measure before Dr. Windtl.orst. Russia and Austria were Windthorst. Russia and Austria were in favor of an international conference. France made her decision dependent upon the action England should take. England rejected the proposal, and Austria afterwards withdrew her consent. The negotiations were now confined to Germany and Russia. The government could not make the hw more lenient than it already was, but they hoped through social reforms to give workmen their dues, namely work so long as they were able to labor, and support them whenever they were unable to toll any longer. Pacinmentary obstruction simply impeded the government. If the bill should be rejected the government would discuss it with another Parliament. Should this likewise reject the bill the goverament will be exonerated of all res-possibility and could regard the fur-ther development of social democracy with a quiet conscience.
