So the money was left with the clerk of the court. For $299 they had gained two things; permission from the city to op-enty and blatantly violate the state and city laws, and also protection from the police of Ogden against any noisy interference with their law breaking. "Here are the names of the men who were charged with running gambling houses in defiance of law and openly confessed their guilt by paying the amount requested. W. J. Powers, J. F. Smith & Co., Creighbaum & Petersen, Burne & Carter, Beinwater & G'Hara. "They were charged, as I have stated. If they were guiltless, I fancy they would resent and fight the charge."
