SENDS LIST OF SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Passing Years Add Honor and Fame to the Pioneers of 1847.

CARD FROM THE FIRST PRESIDENCY.

Salt Lake City, Jan. 25, 1895.

Notice is hereby given that contributions to the monument to be erected in Salt Lake City in memory of Brigham Young and the pioneers will hereafter, and until further notice, be acknowledged through the columns of the DESERET NEWS. It is expected that agencies for the collection of funds for this worthy purpose will be established in each ward in all the Stakes, and that said funds, with the list of names of the contributors, will be forwarded as frequently as convenient to Heber M. Wells, secretary of the Brigham Young Memorial Association, Salt Lake City, who will see that same are properly acknowledged in the manner stated. We earnestly hope that the people will respond generously and promptly to this call so that if possible the monument may be completed, dedicated and unveiled to the public by the 6th day of next October.

WILFORD WOODRUFF,
GEORGE Q. CANNON,
JOSEPH F. SMITH,

A DAIRYMAN WHO MAKES MONEY.

Achieved Success by Feeding Up and Breeding Up His Cows.

The nine cows I had in 1875 were called good cows, and I think they were better than the average of cows of the neighborhood. They were a cheerful grades, with a trifle of Ayrshire blood. My first effort was in the direction of feeding better—planting fodder corn to help out the pasture in the last part of summer and fall and feeding more grain in winter. This largely increased the product per cow. Still, although they gave large messes of milk when fresh, they did not hold out well, and many of them got fat. I commenced weeding out my herd by selling off those that got fat to the butcher and filling their places with heifers I raised from the best cows. I after awhile made it a rule that any cow that would not give milk enough when fed high to prevent her from making beef could not stay with me. I found it difficult to keep up my herd in this way without buying cows, as so many went for beef, until I paid more attention to breeding for the dairy. This I did by getting as good a Jersey bull as I could obtain. I have kept right on breeding in that line for about 14 years, so that my cows are most of them high grades—many of them fifteen-sixteenths and still higher.

For a few years I used to test my cows by setting the milk of a cow occasionally by itself and making it into butter. That was a slow process, but it paid. Since the invention of the Babcock test I have used that and the scales to weed out my herd. I raise the heifers from my best cows for my own use. The others I dispose of. I have some cows that do not come up to my standard each year to dispose of, but the number grows less each year. Of course some get ailing, but very few get fat, no matter how high I feed, while giving milk. So much for breeding.

That is good so far as it goes, but the right kind of feeding and the most profit with it, is the secret of the best cow in the world with no first class cow. Cows should be fed liberally and fed right from calfhood up to get the best results. Calves should be fed so as to promote rapid growth and development, but never so as to make them excessively fat. The best heifer that is fed well to likely to stick to cows through life, so that whenever they are fed high in the attempt to get large results in milk production they will readily begin to lay on flesh and not turn all the food they eight to into milk. My calves are fed skimmilk, oats, bran, clover hay and sometimes oilmeal. They have skimmilk till they are 6 or 8 months old, and sometimes longer. Those are more profitable now on my farm that have had skimmilk every day of their lives. They are fine ones and nearly cows in size, but not one of them is beefy.

Some years ago some of our advanced dairymen advocated feeding corn grain in summer even when the pasture was good. I had always supposed good pasture was the best feed for milk production—but in fact I discovered by my grain feeding with it. I fed a small ration of grain and corn meal. It used to cold but little to the flow of milk, and some more of good judgment to me than about it were of the opinion that I was throwing away and wasting the grain sold. But the open fall set before in the fall and gave much more milk in some where than in previous years. When I came to grain up in the end of the year, I found my herd had increased in number of head, but not in the average weight. I had one cow that weighed 1,400 pounds and was worth a dollar a pound, and a picture I had got back in better fix. You may be sure I have fed them every summer since.

I repeat that when cows I to feed all that they will eat and properly digest every day in the year except during certain times they are dry. Then the grain feed is nicely stopped off. In summer, when hay can not be in the stable to be refined, in addition to the grain feed there is always put before them something easily eat dried hay, and this can be fed to cut some, to mingle with the grain as he whole of that can not be so given is carefully gathered. The less of grain is wasted and will eat and digest more if they have a variety. This most day's ration in winter is about the following from will equal corn, 30 pounds; clover hay, 5 pounds; are cut corn fodder, 5 pounds, what more they will eat, say 5 pounds. And under the grain ration one 5 pounds of wheat bran and 5 pounds of oilmeal is recommended meal. This would make, with the cut is the silage, from 15 to 25 pounds of grain. This is for the average of the cows. Some will require more, and some less, according to their condition. This year they are having 5 pounds of good corn meal 5 pounds of gluten meal a day, and we think it is fully as good as when we fed the cottonseed meal. The cows are watered twice a day, and in cold weather the water is warmed to 50 or 60 degrees.—C. P. Goodrich in Breeder's Gazette.

Suggested by His Deficiencies.

Mr. Billus—I've had a rueling in my head all day. I think I'll consult a doctor about it.

Mrs. Billus—Hadn't you better consult a shoemaker?—Chicago Tribune.

SUMMONS.

In the District Court in and For the Third Judicial District of Utah Territory, County of Salt Lake.

Alice Adelia Bailey, plaintiff, vs. Ralph Bailey, defendant.

The people of the Territory of Utah send greeting to Ralph Bailey, defendant.

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED TO appear in an action brought against you in the above named court in the County and Territory aforesaid, by the filing of the complaint of the plaintiff in the office of the Clerk of said court, and to answer the complaint filed therein within ten days after the service on you of this summons, if served within this county; or within thirty days if served without this county, but within this judicial district; or within forty days if served without this judicial district, and you are hereby notified that unless you so appear and answer the complaint as required by law, the plaintiff will take judgment against you for the relief demanded in the complaint.

The said action is brought to obtain a decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, and awarding to her the care, custody and control of the minor children of said marriage, awarding such reasonable permanent alimony out of the property of the defendant to the plaintiff for the support of herself and said minor children during their minority, and awarding to her the costs of this action, and such other and further relief as to the Court may seem just and equitable.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness, the Hon. Charles S. Zane, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, [illegible] in and for the District of the Territory of Utah, and the seal of the District Court, this 7th day of May, A. D. 1895.
