

SALT LAKERS IN GOTHAM.

Well Known Bishop From Mexico in the Metropolis—
Street Meetings Resumed by the Elders—The Veterans of the Actors' Home.

Special Correspondence.

New York, Aug. 3.—Bishop William D. Johnson, of Diaz, Mexico, is paying a visit to New York. Since arriving, nearly two weeks ago, he has not been in the best of health, owing to the great difference in the altitude of this city and the city of Mexico, where he has been on business for two months previous to coming here. Although the little town of Diaz lies about the same as Salt Lake, the city of Mexico is 8,000 feet above sea level, and when one is not accustomed to the low altitude, it produces a depressing effect for the first few days. He is now becoming acclimated and beginning to enjoy the walks and rides around the city. The reports he brings from far off children and his sons are very interesting; the first named boasts six colonies of "Mormons," and the latter two, all in a flourishing condition. Bishop Johnson will remain in New York for some time, but he has taken his departure for his home in Mexico.

Last Monday evening Miss Alice Young, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. William Young, gave a small party at her home to a few friends, including President and Mrs. McQuarrie, Mrs. Werner and daughter Margaret, Elders Woods and Knowlton, and Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Easton. A few days later, on the invitation of Miss Alice, the same party, reinforced by several more of the small colony here, took their lunch baskets and found their way up to Bronx park, there to remain for the day, enjoying the pure air and shaded lawns.

Alfred Best, Jr., decided yesterday to return home and resume his old position in the University of Utah. There have been several good openings here for him in a musical way, but none strong enough to keep him from home and his work there. Next summer may see him again in New York, hard at work with his teacher in vocal instruction. He has made rapid progress in the short time he has been here, and feels encouraged to return and continue the work.

The first street meeting of the "Mormon" Elders since Mayor Low's permission was given, was held last Monday evening at the corner of Seventh and Broadway, near the corner of Twenty-fifth street. President Welling being the speaker, a great crowd of people stood and listened with respect to what was said, not one jeering remark, or interruption being heard. The Elders are not permitted to sell books or distribute tracts so far, but it is thought that phase of the proceedings will develop later. Meetings will be held on the same corner Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays of each week for the present.

President McQuarrie left for Albany last week on business, he will return shortly and bring his little daughter with him. She has been the guest of Mrs. Frank for some time.

For two months Miss Jennie Hawley has been visiting friends in Malden, Mass., and on Long Island. She returned to the city on Monday, Aug. 3.

Miss Ada Patterson left New York for a trip of a week or 10 days last Thursday and may go as far west as Michigan before returning east.

Alfred Swenson, who as "Amulok" and "Sheldon" in the "Coronation" production, is well remembered in Utah, has fallen into good luck since his arrival in New York. She is engaged with the "Little Church Around the Corner" company, which goes out and first week in September playing only one week stands, being booked the entire season. Walter Percival, also of "Coronation" fame, has been engaged with the "Chaperones" under Frank L. Perley, opening at Asbury Park, Aug. 15. A long season is promised him also.

The 21 grey haired "guests" who now make up the household of the "Actors' Fund Home," arrived in their Sunday finery (replete of by-gone stage splendor) stood the other day on the broad stone veranda of the elegant home, with hands extended, to greet the visitors who came the long distance from their homes in the city, to an extreme point on Staten Island, the spot selected by the late Louis Aldrich, founder of the Home for these veterans of a past decade to live out their remaining days in comfort and peace. And right royally were all welcomed. The first Sunday of every month an entertainment is given for the old people, made up largely of the professional element for all are willing to add their mite.

To the enjoyment of the old vets of other days. Mrs. Sol Smith, and her daughter, Miss Alice Brown, secretary of the "Professional Woman's League," are the chief movers in this worthy enterprise. Doubtless many articles have found their way into your papers, describing this refuge for the old profession, remaining days in comfort and peace. On the invitation of Mrs. Jas. Ferguson, Mr. R. C. Easton and his wife were among those who made the trip to this quiet corner of the island and partook of its hospitality. The house is an exact copy of Shakespeare's at Stratford-on-Avon, with of course many alterations inside. The "home" being thoroughly modern, with its airy bedrooms and five bath rooms on each floor. It has parlors, library, reception rooms, and a large dining room, and its basement, by the way, is the most fascinating part of the house, containing billiard, card and smoking rooms, its walls covered with old pictures and programs, its great easy chairs and lot of all, its kitchen, modern and luxurious. In the card room were many programs of benefit performances, given for the "fund," the name of W. T. Harris appears on the first of these. Mr. and Mrs. Sheridan Corbin have the management here. Mr. Corbin, who is an Englishman, brought over the famous "British Blondes," taking them as far west as the coast, and he speaks very enthusiastically of his visit to Salt Lake in the old days.

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent, and Stacey Cowell, are "guests" here. Mr. Vincent was manager of "Niilo's" old theater on Broadway, near Bleeker, many years ago, and managed the "Black Crook," among other attractions; he is also brother of Felix Vincent, who played several engagements in Salt Lake. Every character in this beautiful place recalls some stage triumph of years gone by, and very interesting is each face, with its crown of silver hair and deepened lines, telling of the many struggles and heartaches through which it has passed. Every member is given fifty cents a week for car fare—that is the extent that is allowed aside from their living, but all have friends who are willing to help clothe them, so that they are amply provided for.

REAR ADMIRAL A. S. BARKER.

The above is the latest portrait taken of Rear-Admiral A. S. Barker, upon whom will devolve the working out of all the details incident to the maneuvers. The maneuvers, commencing on Aug. 3rd, will last to almost the close of the month. More than thirty vessels, expected to take part in this military war, are now gathering along the North Atlantic coast. The entire fleet will be reviewed and inspected by the president on Aug. 15, off Oyster Bay.

At the Sunday night entertainment, Mr. Sidney Rosenfeld delivered a most eloquent address, Mrs. Rosenfeld sang. Mr. C. Easton was on the program for song but was obliged to respond to requests for three more than he was down for; several of the "guests" gave recitations and songs, their faces glowing with delight at the applause they received. The old glory of the footlights still clings to them, and keeps warm the cords of their hearts, which will beat in sympathy to the hand claps they hear as long as life stirs their feeble frames. How Wild Animals, in Captivity, Learn to Enjoy Themselves.

Written for the "News."

It is hard to understand how wild animals can build up and be happy in the narrow quarters of a cage. The unknown person will tell you that this cannot be, that animals born in a wild state must pine away when their liberty is taken away. This idea looks good, and sentimentally is all right, but some-daily life with little or no exciting change, one might think they would become morose and unlovable, if not listless. The animal man says they adapt themselves to the new conditions and before long invent ways and means of amusing themselves. Everyone knows that elephants are more or less frolicsome, big as they are, and pick out a lot of fun with each other. Members of the cat tribe are a greedy lot and will fight among themselves at feeding time, but after the meal is over they mingle with good humor and seldom bear grudges. These animals are given a neck piece of beef that contains a bone, and the beasts are obliged to tear the meat off slowly and in small pieces. They are forced to chew it, and in consequence there is not a case of dyspepsia among them.

AN AMUSING SIGHT.

When they are finished with the bone it has the shine of a billiard ball, and to see a group of leopards or tigers toss one of these bones from one to the other in playful spirit is a most interesting sight. They undoubtedly have found this an amusing pastime and seldom miss the tossed bone, which is quickly passed from mouth to mouth. Another way the cats have of amusing themselves is to play with the boys' cat leap frog. One will stand rigidly upright and all the others will jump over his back. Sometimes two stand side by side, and at Ringling Bros' menagerie winter quarters, in a big enclosure, were used by the lions and tigers as many as six were seen to line up side by side for the rest to jump over. Sometimes these beasts have actual wrestling matches. They stand away from each other, erect upon their hind legs, and spar with their forepaws for an opening. When they clinch it is in deadly earnest, apparently, and the weaker animal never lets go until he is flattened on the breast of his back after the style of human wrestlers.

Even hyenas, about as unprepossessing looking animals as one could find, run and jump and dance in company with each other as if their scowling faces hideously belied their real nature. A big rubber ball was given to a pair of them recently by a kindly disposed person, and the way they took hold of it for playful purposes was interesting in the extreme. They had been confined together for several years and amused themselves by twisting and jumping and turning, but until their lives they never showed anything like the same spirit of happiness. Instead of tearing it to pieces as one might imagine would be the case, they acted as if they instinctively knew its purpose and at once began to share its pleasure. It evidently filled a long felt want in their monotonous lives.

SPORTS OF BEARS.

Bears are ungainly creatures, but in their lumbering way they find amusement that serves to lighten their burdens of captivity. Young bears are as playful as kittens. This is the instinct of all young. The big fellows delight in wrestling and in charging at each other, sometimes with the pitch of a football half-back. Round sticks, somewhat thicker and longer than a broom handle, were put into a cage of four handsome adult bears, and in a very little time they had learned to hold them firmly and round keener delight in slashing each other like two fencers. The sticks generally clashed and seldom got to the head or body, which looked as if they had some sense of the fencing art. At all events they handled them smartly, and seemed to enjoy the sport.

In a hippopotamus den there is a tank of water as well as a dry platform, so that the big fellow can wallow to his heart's content in his favorite element and sun himself on the beach. To see him turn his heavy body over on his back and slide down from his dry perch into the water is a funny sight, and not infrequently he comes up to the surface feet first and then wriggles heavily, as if the difficult position, the

As You Like It

That is about the way The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York issues policies in these days of varied requirements in business and family life.

The postscript to a letter written by Mr. E. H. Walter, of Clarksville, Del., enforces this thought:

"What Mr. Walter did take was a dividend check for $196.98 on the paid-up policy of a $1,000, which cost him all told $148.02. He says:

"The feature which I particularly like about my policy is that it has no fine print, and that it is the only one of any life there is nothing more for me to pay."

(From Wilmington (Del.) News, Nov. 27, 1902.)

In writing for terms for a policy of this kind, state what you would like to receive in cash at the end of limited payment period, amount you would like your beneficiary to receive in event of your death, and give your age.

few seconds it lasts before he turns over, was ravaged. The Ringling Bros. have a hippopotamus that has a habit of standing on its head in the water and kicking its heels above the surface, a good deal like boys in a swimming pool.

MONKEYS ARE DELICATE.

Monkeys have a repertoire of pastimes to while away their days in captivity as changeable as a flower and with as much variety in developing ways and means for mischief as well as entertainment. They are past masters in the art of stealing and are as restless as the waves of the sea. If there is any great shakes of good in physical culture, monkeys, because of their tireless exercising, ought to have the contour and strength of perfect animals. Somehow or other this does not follow. Their arms do not get bigger, nor do their legs and the deep breathing exercise seem to make the least difference to their lungs. They are almost as sensitive as a flower and wither in drought as easily. But they take a cheerful view of life and cut up all kinds of didos from morning until night. Their lives they try to make one round of pleasure, as if they appreciated its shortness.

Birds from tropical countries seem to get over the animosities of their birthplace and "mix up" in royal good fashion. Instead of pinning away because they cannot fly at large, they agreeably spend their time hopping, jumping and chattering. A stout string with which they play tug of war sometimes one and sometimes several on a side, and a tinkling little bell, hardly bigger than a walnut shell, with a toothpick handle, which a bird would grab deftly and jingle and then fly away hastily as if in fright, afforded almost continuous amusement to a family group recently imported from Australia.

Potent Pill Pleasure.

The pills that are potent in their action and pleasant in effect are Dr. Williams' Little Early Risers. W. S. Philpot of Albany, Ga., says: "During a bilious attack I took one. Small as it was it did me more good than calomel, blue-mass or any other pills I ever took and at the same time it effected me pleasantly. Little Early Risers are certainly an ideal pill." Sold by all druggists.
