CONGRESSIONAL.

WASHINGTON, 3.—Both submitted a resolution requesting the Secretary of the Interior to communicate to the Senate the last annual report of the Central Pacific Railroad; agreed to.

The Chair laid before the Senate the unfinished business, being the bill introduced yesterday by Mr. Ingalls to enable the central branch of the Union Pacific Railroad Company to submit its claims, against the United States under the existing laws, to the decision of the Supreme Court, the question being on the second reading of that bill. It was read a second time and laid on the table at the request of Mr. Ingalls.

WRIGHT moved that all orders be laid aside, and that the Senate proceed with the consideration of the bill declaring the true intent and meaning of the Union Pacific Railroad act.

Boutwell said the object of this bill was to declare the true interpretation of a statute passed sixteen years ago. He said there were more important matters requiring the attention of the Senate. If this statute was to be interpreted the courts should do it. He opposed the motion.

Wright moved to proceed with the consideration of the bill introduced by him.

After further discussion the motion of Wright was agreed to, yeas 31, nays 8.

Sherman said he had examined into the whole subject some years ago, and he had come to the conclusion that the company had no claim against the United States, though he did not think it was wise to attempt to pass this bill, yet there were various interests involved, and it should not be considered with a light hand.

Conkling said this bill was an old customer. It had been here a good many years, and he thought it best to consider it and dispose of it now, rather than let it remain a subject of controversy.

Ingalls said the company could not be deprived of its vested rights by any act of legislation. He proposed by this bill the company had not asked legislation, but desired to have the questions submitted to the courts.

Edmonds said that the committee on the judiciary had come to the conclusion that the company was not entitled to receive any bonds or subsidies further than it had already received. He suggested that the claim would not have a status in any judicial court of the United States. The subject was one of legislative action. It had been the case several times that when Congress turned its back and went home to get a long rest, some of the members of the committee on the interior on account of some new brief saw his way clear to get ready to push out his bonds and lands to this railroad company. It was not the way to do business, and he desired to put an end to this everlasting tinkering of the departments to get the thing decided in the absence of Congress.

Ingalls argued that the statutes under which this road was organized authorized the Secretary of the Interior and Attorney General to decide upon the claims of the company for the Senate. The company, in applying to the departments named for a subsidy, did just what the statute required it to do. There were but twenty-five members of the Senate, and the company had not presented out of the Senate composed of seventy-five members. Was it right that this small number of Senators should decide upon the rights of this company? He contended that the company had acted entirely within the meaning of the statute, and had made no application to any officer for subsidy to whom they were not authorized to apply.

Edmonds said he remembered the time when somebody professing to be connected with this company hinted that it would be a good thing for him (Edmonds) to take up a few sections of land in the neighborhood of that railroad. He would hardly believe that the officers of the company would attempt to buy sections of land, must therefore think that the person who made such a hint to him was some bum.

Ingalls said so far as he knew the company had not attempted to enforce anything but its legal rights, and in a manner which he believed to be perfectly legitimate.

Pending the discussion, on motion of Mr. Edmunds, the Senate adjourned.

No Women Preachers Allowed. NEWARK, 3.—The Presbytery, today, by a vote of 16 to 12, found the Rev. Mr. L. guilty of violating the scriptures by allowing women to preach in his pulpit.

Sentenced to be Hanged. YANTRON, 3.—In the United States Court, today, John McCall, convicted of the murder of Wild Bill, was sentenced by Chief Justice Shannon to be hanged on March 10. The only ground of defense is that he was intoxicated so as to be unconscious of the act.

WASHINGTON, 3.—Ex-Assistant District Attorney Chas. G. Fisher, recently convicted of abstracting court papers, was sentenced, today, to eleven months in the common jail.

Cronin and Turner Create an Excitement. Cronin's examination, and telegraph manager Turner's refusal to testify before the Senate committee, have furnished to-day's sensation in Washington, and are to light the chief topics of conversation.

Cronin failed to make a good appearance on the witness stand, his manner being very self-conscious, and at times almost comical. His testimony contradicted the concurrent evidence of all the republican witnesses in every important particular, but on cross-examination he was completely contradicted himself in regard to minor matters and details. For instance, he testified on the direct examination, that he was a little angry by Patrick's telling him he could get anything he wanted from Tilden, if Tilden was elected by his instrumentality, but under Morton's cross-examination, shortly afterwards he said Tilden's suggestion did not offend him at all.

Being questioned whether he thought it was right to withhold the certificates when the majority of the college demanded them, he answered to the effect that he did not consider it a question of right, but one of expediency. Cronin's acknowledgment that he received $3,000, nominally for his expenses, created much significant comment, and Morton's questions, which Turner refused to answer, very plainly indicated that the public expected to prove the corrupt use of at least $25,000, of which this is conjectured to be a part.

A number of other witnesses will be summoned on this branch of inquiry, including probably the New York Herald, and other newspapers in Morton's leading questions. It is also understood that determined efforts will be made to get at the facts regarding the alleged telegrams sent to the Pacific coast from the east by Ex-Senator Gwin.

Cheyenne, 3.—Restoration of the communication with Fetterman gives the following details of Crook's return: Fetterman, Dec. 29, 1876. Crook's command reached here today. The campaign is closed, the hostilities being too distant to be reached in the winter. The command reached Belle Fourche on Dec. 23d, in very severe weather. On Christmas the mercury froze in the bulb. The animals suffered for want of forage, and a number of mules were killed. The forage train was met at Wind River Creek. Last night the Sioux and Arapahoe scouts left for Red Cloud.

On the 23d Col. Randall, with seventy Cheyenne and a general near Pumpkin Butte, but as their services were not required they were sent back. They report that the destruction of the Cheyenne village by Crook's army caused a general stampede. Trails were passed leading in various directions, showing that the Indians were scattering.

Crazy Horse is on the Little Missouri. General Crook is satisfied with the results of the campaign, as it has kept the Indians on the move in dead winter. He expresses the opinion that the hostilities will not stand another campaign. Friendly Indians with a small column of troops will finish the matter. There is every reason to believe a general force can be raised among the surrounding tribes when spring opens.

Court Martial. LEAVENWORTH, Kans., 3.—Major General Pope left for Cheyenne, today, to attend a general court martial to be held there on the 13th inst. He was accompanied by General Jeff. C. Davis, Major Swain and Major Dunn.

FOREIGN. GREAT-BRITAIN. (Eastern Edition.) LONDON, 3.—A dispatch dated Constantinople, to-day, says the plenipotentiaries do not appear to have abandoned the hope that a rupture may yet be avoided. The German and Italian Ambassadors on Tuesday adopted a somewhat more conciliatory tone. At the present moment it is believed that the Porte, at the dictation of the conference to-morrow, will not give a formal refusal to the demands of the Powers.

AUSTRIA. (Eastern Edition.) VIENNA, 3.—The Political Correspondence prints a Constantinople telegram dated January 2nd, which says that the Austrian government has brought to bear the agreement of the Turkish cabinet is less complete than it was before. Midhat Pasha, the Grand Vizier, threatens to resign, and there is a possibility of a ministerial crisis.

A LAND OF LUSCIOUSNESS. THE GRAPES, BERRIES, CHERRIES, AND OTHER CHOICE FRUITS OF THE BLACK HILLS. A correspondent writing from Deadwood, gives glowing accounts of the products of the Black Hills, and says that the fruit of the Black Hills is the home of the red raspberry.

Near Garden City, on False-bottom Creek, there is a raspberry thicket five miles long and half a mile wide, and the vines stand on the ground as wheat; the vines resemble the Clark raspberry. The berries have a finer size, color and flavor than the Clark raspberry, and the same taste, and are profitable than the Philadelphia berries. Thousands of gallons of these berries were picked by the miners and carried in baskets from six to ten miles to Deadwood, and sold at one dollar per gallon. I have never seen a black cap raspberry in the Hills. Blackberries flourish in great abundance on the foot hills around Constantin and Crook City.

Strawberries grow in great profusion in all the valleys, mountains, and foothills in the Black Hills. The berries are of several varieties, and are covered with the vines. I have seen as large a stool of wild strawberry plants in the Hills as in the States. The berries ripen in July. I have seen some very fine specimens of the improved varieties, and have brought here and properly cultivated. I have in the last few days seen whole acres of vines looking as fresh and green as any I have ever seen or heard of as any Fawcett or Becker can show at this season of the year.

The wild gooseberry plant almost reaches the dignity of trees. On Sawpit Gulch I have seen the plant growing as high as my head; the fruit is large size and abundant.

Wild currants are very plentiful along the gulches, red, white and black. The fruit compares favorably with the cultivated varieties in the States.

Wild cherries, or choke cherries as they are commonly called, are very abundant; the bushes are a little taller than the gooseberry, and in season are loaded with fruit. Some persons eat them and seem to like them very much. I am very fond of fruit, but I don't like to eat wild cherries, but they certainly would make a very pretty ornament in the yard.

Wild plums grow in great variety on the foothills. Whole acres of plum trees are found near Constantin and Crook City. Plums as large as the green gage, and of equal flavored plums, blue plums, yellow plums, and white plums grow in the greatest profusion, and are a curiosity to most of the people who visit the Black Hills.

Wild grapes grow in great abundance in the valleys along the foothills, although I have never seen a grape-vine near the mines. At Crook City and on the Red Water I have seen grapevines six inches in diameter. The fruit is of the variety usually called fox or winter grapes in the States, and contains too much acid to be very palatable. But, owing to the dryness of the atmosphere here, I have no doubt, but the cultivated grape would be raised in great perfection, especially the Concord, Clinton, and Norton's Virginia, and other hardy varieties.

A grape never milder or rot here, and the season is plenty long to mature them is proven by the ripening of the wild grape, which is a month later maturing than the cultivated varieties in the States. Grapes would be very rich in saccharine matter, consequently would make good wine.

The high-bush cranberry full of fruit is a beautiful sight. On the 10th of September I took a bushel basket and went up Whitewater creek to look for cranberries. After going up the creek about a mile from Deadwood I found a bush of a cranberry thicket, the bushes of which were about ten feet high when standing erect, but at the time I saw them the tops of the bushes were bent nearly to the ground with the weight of fruit. The high-bush cranberry resembles in the fruit the cultivated berry of the States, not quite so large or so acid, but of much finer flavor. In one hour I gathered a bushel of berries, and ate some of the best pies, jelly and jam made out of them.

Service berries, red and black have grown here. Black nuts grow here in great quantities. Apples would do well. The season is too short for peaches.—Omaha Rec.

Consumption can be Cured.

Standard Steam Laundry Office, Cleveland, O., Oct. 30, 1876. DR. FRAZIER. Dear Sir: I feel it a duty I owe to suffering humanity to write you, stating the wonderful benefit I have derived from the use of your Life-Syrup and Strengthening Root-Bitters. For some time I was sorely afflicted with a cough, raising blood, with every symptom of consumption. I tried different medicines and cures, without finding relief. I also consulted three of our most prominent Cleveland physicians, the last of which pronounced my case hopeless, and informed me I could not live more than a few months. About this time, hearing of your wonderful success, I commenced taking your Life-Syrup for the lungs, in connection with your Root-Bitters, and at once was benefited, and after using the medicine some two months, I am now as well as ever. If this statement of my case can be of any service to you in bringing your medicine to the notice of the suffering, my object in writing this note will be attained. I am, Sir, very truly, your obedient servant, J. W. Frazier, proprietor, Cleveland, Ohio, Cleveland Mail.
