EVENING NEWS.

Wednesday, - March 27, 1878.

A Visit to the Lepers.

We make the following interesting extracts from a letter written at Wailuken Maui, Sandwich Islands, Feb. 19th, 1878, by Elder Henry P. Richards, addressed to his family in this city:

"I left this island at half-past 9 in the evening, and after a pleasant sail of nine hours, under a bright full moon, in a small open whale boat, I landed safely on Molokai. The wind was very light or we should have reached the island sooner. The President of the Church upon that island met me at the beach, when we went directly to his house. In two or three days after we started on a tour around the island, he furnishing horses and going with me wherever I wished to go. While upon this island I visited the Leper settlement, where I met with our old friend and brother, Napela, the native who visited Salt Lake City about nine years ago. Poor fellow, it made my heart ache to see him. His wife is a leper, and was brought to this settlement four or five years ago. He, refusing to leave her, came with her to this settlement, and he has now got the disease. There are now at this settlement 700 lepers, and some 900 have died of that disease within the last eight or nine years at this place alone, not counting hundreds of others who have died, and who now have the disease scattered throughout the different islands.

"I remained at the settlement over Sunday and held two meetings, and I could not help but shed tears in arising to address a congregation of lepers, all more or less maimed and disabled for life, and whose only hope in this world is for death to come and relieve them of their misery. This settlement is a natural prison, surrounded on one side by steep, rugged mountains, and by the sea on the other, and no one is permitted to visit the settlement, or to leave it only by permission from government or from the agent of the board of health. Therefore, when a leper is arrested and brought to this place, he has no hope only to be separated from his relatives and friends and to remain here as long as he lives, as the disease is considered incurable.

"While I was at the settlement I stopped with the Catholic priest at that place, who is temporary superintendent, the superintendent having died some two or three months previous, as it is not considered wisdom to stop among the natives for fear of being inoculated with the disease, by sleeping in their blankets, eating their food or shaking hands with them. Of course while there the relative merits of Mormonism and Catholicism were duly discussed between ourselves, but I do not think either of us was converted to the other's religious views.

"I remained upon that island two weeks, when I returned to Lahaina, upon this island, where I remained one day, then took passage for Lanai, where I remained eleven days. There is but one branch of the church upon this island, numbering about 40, who generally feel well. In fact it is about the liveliest branch in this country. I held conference at this place, dedicated a new meeting house they had just completed, and baptized one.

"I also held conference upon the Island of Kolokai, baptized six, and visited six branches of the church, held several meetings, and married one couple."

The many friends of Elder Richards will be pleased to learn that he is in the enjoyment of good health. He intended holding a conference at the place from which he wrote, on the 10th of March, and soon after to return to Lale.

Senator Christiancy Ably Supports Thurman's Bill to Provide a Sinking Fund for the Pacific Railroads — A Bill Regulating Railroad Tariffs in Preparation — The report of the Committee that has been Investigating Doorkeeper Polk — The Compromise Silvers Bill.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 20.

Editors Deseret News:

Yesterday, as is nearly always the case on Monday, was a dull day so far as congressional proceedings are concerned. In the Senate, Mr. Christiancy made a careful legal argument on Senator Thurman's bill to provide a sinking fund for the Pacific railroads. He took the ground that the government has a legal right to provide for the payment of the road's indebtedness in this way, and that if the companies are honest in their intention to pay, they cannot object to the plan. Senator Christiancy had evidently spent much care and labor in the preparation of his speech, and he delivered it with the calmness and force of a decision from the bench. He looks upon this question as one of great importance, and, although his efforts yesterday was wanting in the sensational effect of his maiden speech, with its almost unique view of the Pinchback case, it is looked upon as the ablest speech he has made in the Senate. He spoke from the desk of Senator Chandler, and the seats in the immediate vicinity of this central position were occupied by Senators Thurman, Hoar, Davis, of Illinois, and other senators who enjoy a legal argument. The judiciary committee, it will be remembered, were unanimous in their report on this bill, and they feel a deep interest in its passage. It was agreed that each member of the committee would support the bill with a speech in the Senate. Senators Thurman, Davis, and Christiancy have already spoken. Senator Edmunds will speak next, and, after him will come Senators McDonald, and Conkling. It is not usual for a committee to support a bill with such unanimity, but, notwithstanding the weight of talent in favor of this bill, another bill reported by the committee on railroads seems to have the more general approval of the Senate. Much time in Congress has been taken up with proposed railroad legislation, and it is probable that the discussion of questions relating to transportation will result in enactments unfavorable to the corporations. A senator from an eastern State proposes soon to present a bill to regulate railroad tariffs throughout the country. He claims that Congress has the constitutional right to control railroads, to a certain extent, and he thinks that in the interest of public policy this power should be exercised. The Senator says the railroads have formed a gigantic combination, and that their aggregate receipts exceed the revenue of the United States; that the railroad companies, through combination, have become so solidified and so well organized that their portentious influence threatens every other interest, and that there is imminent need that Congress should come to the rescue of the people. He has not yet drafted a bill, but he even sketched its provisions, but he is giving the question careful study and posting himself as to the authority of Congress over transportation lines and public carriers. The senator will present his bill with strong arguments, and will adduce many instances of unfair discrimination by railroads; as for example, the rate on flour from Central Indiana to New York is about 50 cents, while only 20 cents is charged from St. Louis. The railroads will, of course oppose the bill, and they will not be without powerful friends in Congress.

The Dean-Field contest in the House has been postponed until next Tuesday. These contested seats always produce more or less excitement in Congress, hence its postponement was a serious disappointment to those in the galleries who had come to see the fun. To-day a matter of greater interest than a contested seat will come up, in the report of the committee that had under investigation the conduct of Doorkeeper Polk. The report exonerates him from corruption or any practices that can affect his honor, but impeaches his prudence, and recommends his removal on the ground of what may be called an injudicious distribution of the places under his control. This, when translated, means that Colonel Polk has yielded to the onset of clamorous congressmens demanding more offices for their vagabond relatives than the pay-roll will accommodate, and he must now suffer alone the penalty that should be visited on others. Or, in other words, must be made a scape goat, burdened with the follies of democratic office-seekers, and their congressional backers.

General Gragg has introduced in the House a new bill, for the pay of the army, which is backed by the military committee, and the special caucus committee in conference. The new compromise bill constitutes and limits the pay of officers of infantry as follows:" General $12,000 a year; Lieutenant General $8,000; Major General $5,000; Brigadier General $5,000; Colonel $3,000; Lieutenant Colonel $3,500; Major $2 600. The bill provides for the payment of each commissioned officer below the rank of Major 10 per cent. of their current yearly pay, for each term of five years of service, provided that the total amount of each increase shall in no case exceed 40 per cent. of the yearly pay of the grade as provided by law. The bill further provides, that in places where there are no public quarters commutation may be paid therefor by the pay department to officers entitled to the same, at a rate not exceeding nine dollars per room per month. The bill if passed will take effect June 30, 1870.
