

SALT LAKERS IN GOTHAM.

Last Rites to the Memory of Major Pond—Maude Adams Already Billed for the Fall—Mr. McCune Off for Peru.

Special Correspondence.

New York, June 29.—Major Pond's last gift was his heart. I think he did not know how to do an unkind thing."

This was the tribute paid to Major Pond by the famous writer. How little we know what the morrow will bring forth! I wrote you last week of the operation Major Pond had submitted to and expressed the belief that his system was strong enough to resist the shock, but even while I wrote, the angel of death was gathering into his arms the spirit of the famous old hero. The funeral of Major Pond was held Tuesday evening, June 23, at 8 o'clock, an unusual hour, but one fixed for the convenience of his friends. The services were held at Major Pond's late residence in Jersey City, the Rev. Dr. H. H. H. of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, and Dr. Chas. Herr, officiating. The Plymouth church quartet furnished the music which was most impressive. The Lafayette post of the Grand Army of the Republic, of which Major Pond was a member, then took charge, and a number of speeches eulogistic of his career were rendered. A host of friends testified their love by their presence and their floral offerings. The interment did not take place till the following day, and the remains were finally deposited in Woodlawn cemetery in the Bronx. Telegrams of sympathy from celebrities all over the world were received by the bereaved widow.

The arrival of Maude Adams on the Deutschland last Thursday, has been the occasion of many warm greetings from the public. The newspapers have but echoed the sentiments of her friends and admirers, in giving her welcome in true American fashion; our knowledge that she has gained so much in weight adds to our pleasure, for it testifies to the undoubted restoration of her health. The billboards at the Empire announce her engagement at that popular place of amusement for some time in November. No mention is made of the play that she first appears in, but the charm of her personality, whether in a new or old one, is sufficient to crowd the theater. Her summer will be passed in the Catskills, one of her delightful country homes, where no echo of the city penetrates. Mrs. Adams is at Konkonkoma, Long Island, the other country home of her daughter, and will remain there until October.

The play that Miss Ruth Eldredge dramatized some time ago from the book written by James A. McKnight, bearing on the southern question, will probably be seen this coming season, as it has been taken up by several managers, who have faith in its drawing qualities. The author gave a reading from a number of its scenes, to a company of critics in this line of work, all of whom pronounced it excellent; they were also enthusiastic over Miss Eldredge's interpretation of the various characters.

Saturday evening Col. Willard Young and his daughters, Misses Hattie and Claire Young, left for the west. Miss Blanche Thomas was to have been of the party, but has now decided to remain until next week. She will go home for six weeks during the warm weather, prior to rehearsing for the "Bonnie Rifer Bush," which will begin about August 25.

Dr. Ralph Richards will return to New York to take up his duties as house surgeon at Bellevue hospital for the next two years, a position he has won through sheer merit. There were over 50 applicants for the place, but young Richards won over all.

Dr. Milton Hardy of Provo arrived in New York a few days ago, and is staying with his friend, Mr. John Sharp, on east Twenty-fourth street. His daughter, Miss Vera, who has been very ill for some time, is improving and will soon be able to leave for home. The doctor was a visitor to the afternoon services at Hawthorne hall. One hundred and twenty-fifth street, on Sunday.

Hon. A. W. McCune, who has been at the Waldorf for some time, leaves for Peru today. Senator Thomas Kearns and David Keith, with Mr. McCune and Senator Clark of Montana, were guests of some of the big railroad magnates of New York, at a dinner given them Tuesday evening at the Union League. The three Utah men and Senator Clark, who are interested in the big railroad enterprise, so important to Salt Lake, are all to be found for the present at the Waldorf.

Mr. Bancroft of the Oregon Short Line, was also seen in the corridors of the Waldorf last Thursday.

At the reception of the Woman's Auxiliary of the National Art Theater society, held last Tuesday evening, at the New York College of Music, Blanche Walsh was the speaker, her subject being, "Stars a menace to the project." Very ably and without gloves, did she handle the topic, pointing out with truthfulness her ideas regarding it. The meeting was enthusiastically patronized, every speaker being listened to with attention. Ada Patterson, chairman of the press committee, gave in a report. Howard Kyle responded to a call to give his views on the subject, and many other well known footlight favorites were heard. Altogether the "Woman's Auxiliary" is receiving a boom on every side, and the influence of this great enterprise is already being felt.

Mr. Geo. A. Snow and family leave on July 1 for Salt Lake. Mr. Snow is now in Chicago, but will return to join his family for the western trip.

Ada Patterson is always a busy woman at the office of the "American and Journal," which claims most of her time, but she gives a good deal of thought to the "National Art Theater" work, and also keeps up with her magazine stories. The "Footlights," will publish one of her articles this month, on "Woman as press, and advance agent."

A certain Ellena Marie, is out in print to defend the dog. "Mazda the children, not the dog," is her war cry. At present New York is having an epidemic of dog bite, and Ellena Marie feels justly indignant at the proposed muzzling of the dog. She considers their rights and comforts, and entrusts the city fathers to muzzle the children and let the "doggies" run at large, arguing that if the children do not interfere with the dogs, they won't bite or annoy people. Naturally the editors will do as they please in the matter, but some fathers and mothers, who are too timid to put their ideas on paper, are quietly suggesting the muzzling of Ellena Marie, for it is evident she has the rabies in very bad form.

Miss Estelle Jensen, who has been in Boston for a year studying piano, arrived in New York a few days ago with her aunt, Miss Graehl, and left Saturday evening for Salt Lake.

Several Utahs; H. Harris at the Belvidere, R. T. Hayward at the Manhattan, Mrs. D. M. Lindsay at the Holland and Mrs. W. Williams and K. Williams are at the Murray Hill.

President McQuarrie left for Boston

Saturday, on a short visit, business with his trip.

Mrs. Nancy Black, formerly of the Ninth ward in Salt Lake, but now a resident of Bloomfield, N. J., with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Milliken, was among the visitors to the Latter-day Saints' chapel Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Black has another married daughter living in Jersey City, and she will make her home with her children for awhile. She is now a member of the Brooklyn conference.

Miss Siegfried Pedersen, daughter of Prof. Anton Pedersen, who has been in Boston for the last three years, studying voice training at the New England conservatory, came down to New York for a short visit before leaving for the west. She left with the Utah party Saturday evening. Miss Pedersen has made great progress in her studies.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Osmond and two children, formerly of Logan, Utah, came to New York Saturday morning and left for Utah the same evening. Mr. Osmond has been a student at Harvard for four years, graduating with the highest honors, probably no Utahn has made a finer record than he; he received honorable mention twice in philosophy, and took out a B. A. degree in literature and philosophy, also receiving honorable mention in literature. Mrs. Osmond came east over a year ago, and has lived in Cambridge ever since.

SOLUTION OF THE PUZZLE OF THE WITCH'S APPRENTICE.

With the picture in its natural position, two snakes can be found in the lower center, formed in the vines at this point. By using the lower right corner as base, one of the lizards can be found at the base of the large tree near this corner. From the right side as base, an owl is found in the upper left corner, the white wolf in the lower left corner and the innkeeper's wife in the basket which the apprentice is carrying. By using the upper right corner as base, a second owl is found, formed in the bow of the boy's sash, one of the innkeeper's servants toward the lower part of the picture, formed in one of the branches, and the witch a little right of center, formed in the boy's hair. By using the upper left corner as base, a second lizard can be found in the apprentice's shadow, and another of the innkeeper's servants toward the right, just back of the apprentice. From the left side as base, the innkeeper is found a little above and to the right of center.

ORIGIN OF THE CINNAMON BEAR.

Find the Grasshopper and Some of the Animals From the Strange Land Which the Bear Saw in His Vision—Twelve in All.

Once upon a time there was a bear who was forever poking his nose into obscure places, apparently in search of something. Just what he was after no one could tell till one day he poked his nose into the mouth of an alligator, whereupon the alligator immediately closed his jaws upon the bear's head, and would not release him until he made the following confession: "Oh, most noble and kind sir, it is very distressing to lay bare the secret of my life in this painful manner, but as there seems to be no help for it, I will proceed at once. As you will perceive by my color, I am what is known as a Cinnamon bear, and whether justly or otherwise, you will be able to judge better later on. Now, it so happened when I was a cub that one day my parents left me alone while they went in search of food, and as they never returned I now take it for granted that instead of obtaining what they sought they became food for somebody else. Many, many weary days I spent in vain search for them. I became thin and careworn, and out of sympathy for me I was one day seized by my friends and made prisoner, lest I should lose my life in the fruitless search for my father and mother. By some oversight I was soon forgotten by my friends and left to die in solitary confinement. Hunger began to gnaw at my vitals, and in a little while I felt exhausted. I became delirious and imagined that I was beset by a great multitude of wild beasts from a strange land of a kind which I had never seen before, and on seeing my helpless condition they were about to devour me. Then there came a grasshopper, who offered to provide me with a light lunch, that I might strengthen myself. On accepting his apparently kind offer I was soon provided with a bountiful repast, which I learned afterward was composed of glow worms. Being thus strengthened, I was about to escape from my tormentors, when he discovered that I had changed into a snow-white bear. The light of the glow worms which I had eaten shone through and made my body as light as day. From that time forth life was a burden to me, for everywhere I went I was taken for a ghost, and so driven from place to place. I found no rest till at last I reached the solitude of the frozen north, and there, in the midst of ice and snow I passed my days. I found shelter and plenty of food in an old wreck which had been abandoned by some exploring party. One day, to my surprise, I discovered that I was gradually assuming a different color. I immediately investigated the matter, and found by examining the labels on the boxes that I had been living on cinnamon cakes. In a little while I made such a presentable appearance that I was able to return to my home and friends, and here I am. "Yes," remarked the alligator, "but why do you go about continually poking your nose into obscure corners and places?" "Oh," replied the cinnamon bear, "that's easy; I'm looking for the grasshopper who filled me up with glow worms so that I can eat him." The moral of this fable is: "We are angry with those who trick us, because they seem to have more wit than ourselves."
