

THE EVENING NEWS.

GEORGE Q. CANNON.
EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Tuesday, February 13, 1870.

A SPECIAL "REVELATION."

Underdate, "Salt Lake City, Jan. 25th," the special correspondent of the New York Herald writes a communication to that paper which is quite interesting. It seems the correspondent had a revelation which he gives to the Herald, and as the subject of the revelation may probably be of interest to our readers, we leave them to decide as to its correctness. For our own part we have heard of revelations in which we had less confidence than this one.

WHAT MAY BE YET—CONCERNING THE CHIEF ORACLE AND PROPHET.

But it is not yet too late. The constitution which the high have informally adopted is only a preliminary draft, subject to amendment and to ratification when all those who shall have come up to this New Jerusalem in April next and be in conference assembled. The 6th of April, 1870, was the date on which Joseph Smith, the original Mormon Prophet, organized the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, at Manchester, N. Y., with half a dozen members. In order to revive and modify, but still retain the traditions of the system, the present secret idea is to have all the "reconstructed" Mormons who can come assemble here on or about the 6th of April, and then, after a day or two, and time on the traditional day and with a traditional name, and by a kind of coup, the trumpets of Zion shall sound the glad tidings of the formal founding of a reorganized system, and at that time of "Eve's home" shall forth the new leader of the Church. And all the people are to recognize him as the man the heavens have sent and to rejoice and sing and shout. Mr. E. B. Kelley, who is said to be one of the coming quorum of the Twelve Apostles whom the heavens have hitherto been pleased to designate, mysteriously attended at the meeting last night, to the "coming man" who quietly awaits the coming day, all unconscious even yet that the heavens have already chosen him as Zion's chief oracle and prophet. "If any persons here anticipate," Kelley said, "that the name of the man whom the Lord has called to lead this Church will be announced to night, such persons will be disappointed. God, in his own due time, will bring forth and manifest His servant. Meanwhile God and His angels have been called to initiate and lead the movement by which the people are to free themselves from human assumptions and be prepared for the full and final organization of the Church of Zion. It is not for us to seek to explain why this is so, it is sufficient that it is so." "No one need be in haste," said Kelley afterwards, "to know who is to be the president of this Church. Every man and woman who lives faithfully and prays earnestly will be satisfied when he comes, and hundreds and thousands will know him by their own inspiration when he does come, and will thus be ready to receive him. I am, as you know, a wise maker, and when I prepare a vessel in which to put the wine, I am very careful that it shall not leak. If any of you know who is the man whom God has called and can conceal it, He has told you; but if you are a leaky vessel you will pray to know in vain."

THE "HERALD" CORRESPONDENT RECEIVES A "REVELATION."

Now I would regret to question Kelley, for he is the first appointed, if not the chief, of the new apostles. But he and his associates so seriously assume that no one outside the sacred circle of a "reconstructed" Mormonism has enjoyed secrecy on the subject designated as Zion's leader, it may not be amiss, since no such divine injunction of secrecy has been imposed on me, to lift a corner of the curtain and let the people take a peep at him. At the close of last evening's meeting I said to one of them who does know, and with whom I am familiar, "Kelley says that no 'leaky vessel' contains this sacred and mysterious secret. But I can tell you who is the 'coming man' who is to be the leader of your movement." He looked incredulous, of course, considering it impossible and preposterous that a matter which the heavens would withhold could be known to a Herald correspondent. "I think," I said, "you think I imagine that I know, but of course you believe I don't." "Tell me," he said, "Kelley says," I repeated, "that no 'leaky vessel' contains the secret." "Then I suppose you are not a 'leaky vessel,' if you know it." "But you know I am the special correspondent of the Herald," I answered, "and it was not revealed to me as a secret." I don't believe you know the right man," was the reply; "for the heavens would not have let you know it if you are going to publish it, when they wished to keep it secret." "Then, if you don't," I said, "just wait till you see the Herald. How do you know," I continued, "as a piece of consolation, how do you know what was purpose that the heavens may have to accomplish through the Herald?" "I can't imagine who you know around here who would be suitable for the leadership of Zion?" "I have not looked for him here," I said, "and you know that you need not look around here for him, for he has not yet been baptized in those waters of the Jordan; his feet have never trod the streets of this New Jerusalem, nor have his eyes ever gazed on this lovely valley or those royal mountains." The interest now was heightening. "Who told you—but who is he?" Under all the circumstances, I said, "he is the best man that could now be chosen as the leader of a re-constructed Mormon movement. But he does not believe in polygamy, you know; and either you will have to surrender your theory of polygamy, or he will have to be converted to it; and I believe the most sensible thing for you to do is to take that plank of polygamy out of your platform, for he cannot stand upon it; it would break down under the weight of his anti-polygamic principles." "Well, well; but how do you know?" "Before he was quite twelve years of age," I continued, "this secret was revealed to him as he is himself, a seer and prophet, appointed him to be his successor and the future leader of the Mormon movement. But Brigham Young, they say, put the toy aside, and usurped the place that rightfully belonged to the youthful Joseph. For his family name is Smith and his Christian name is Joseph. His father was the founder of the original Mormon movement. This new 'Church of Zion' now proposes to re-establish Mormonism very much as it was in the days of the primary prophet, but modified so as to be more in accordance with the liberal opinions of the present generation, and I think it is a capital joke, if Brigham did really usurp the place and steal the birthright of the boy, that Brigham and his band should have had to come out here afoot, and while the youth was growing up to manhood establish this city and the settlements, build a railroad, drive that last and fatal spike into the present system, and the undisputed sway of the present priesthood, so that in view of the certain course of Congress Joseph could come here in the spring, riding in a silver Palace car, to take the place in the affections of the people for which his father had anticipated him, but which has been, as some say, meanwhile usurped by Brigham. If the confidence of the people in Brigham has been for years declining, and a change is needed, Joseph is the man whom it will strike you Mormons as the one to come in to claim your confidence and commence a new regime. His name and traditions would probably produce the enthusiasm anticipated and the effect that is intended, while his anti-polygamic principles would be more in accordance with the instincts of woman, the sentiments of Christendom and true laws of Congress. The whole thing is very timely, and the movement may be the means of averting inconvenience or calamities that would otherwise have fallen on the Mormons here in Utah." "Sir," he said in the language of scripture, "Joseph, I perceive you are a prophet." "Joseph," I resumed, "has ever more fondly cherished the idea that the day would dawn on which he would come up here to assume the leadership of the saints, and vindicate the character and perpetuate the power of his father Joseph. You know it is said that Emma, the wife of the elder and mother of the younger Joseph, refused to follow Brigham Young and his associates in their flight, and that with her sons she has constantly proclaimed against the practice of polygamy and other evils that have crept into the church, as well as the assumptions of the present leaders. Joseph, as you are well aware, is now in Plano, Kendall county, Illinois, and you may expect to see him in Salt Lake City here next summer." "How in the world," was asked of me, "did you ever know who is the man whom the heavens have called to be the leader of the movement?" "Perhaps," I answered, "somewhat facetiously I own—perhaps I have received a revelation." "Yes, yes; but tell me truly, how did you ever know him whom the heavens have called to be the leader of the movement?" "The Herald," I answered, "would probably never know so much as it does know if it always told how it received its information." And thus ended this curious colloquy.

AFTERNOON DISPATCHES.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

Georgia and Mississippi—Salaries of Judges, &c.

The Vice President submitted various executive documents, including a report to the Secretary of War upon Georgia affairs, which was referred to the committee on judiciary. The credentials of Hall and Miller, Senators elect from Georgia, were referred.

Morton made a statement relative to a printed circular circulated this morning in the Senate, containing charges against himself and Fenimore, that they favored and were managing the printing bureau. He stated that there were only two or three employees at this bureau who had been appointed at his instigation, and asked, in reference to the circular and printing, for the committee to take the testimony of the parties making the charge.

Carpenter, from the committee on the judiciary, reported with amendments, a bill to increase the salaries of the Chief Justice and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States. The bill provides that after Jan. 1st, 1870, the salary of the Chief Justice shall be twelve thousand dollars, and the salary of each of the Associate Justices ten thousand. The amendments provide further that the salary of the Circuit Judges shall be six thousand five hundred, and that of the District Judges five thousand.

Morton introduced a bill to enforce the Fifteenth Amendment.

The Mississippi bill was taken up. Howard, Morton and Yates spoke in favor of its position of the conditions; Carpenter spoke in favor of the unconditional admission.

HOUSE.

Cuban Belligerency and Currency question discussed.

Loughridge offered a resolution declaring it as the opinion of the House that the country is in an increased volume of circulating currency, and instructing the committee on banking to report, as soon as possible, a bill increasing the currency to the amount at least of fifty millions. Ward moved to table the resolution, which was not agreed to, 73 to 94. The morning hour expired, and the resolution went over.

The naval and military academy deficiency bill was taken from the Speaker's table. The Senate amendments were non-concurred in. A committee of conference was ordered.

Morgan introduced a bill as a substitute for the Senate currency bill, which was referred to the committee on banks and currency. It provides for the repeal of all laws authorizing the issue of national bank notes and for the issue of gold and treasury notes to the amount of five hundred millions, and requires the Secretary of the Treasury to cancel or destroy matured bonds deposited by the national banks as a security, and to redeem with Treasury notes the bank notes issued on such and to return to the banks the now matured bonds and the redemption of their debts; to destroy all bank notes received by the United States, for taxes or otherwise, and to substitute for them an equal amount of greenbacks, and to pay depositors' bonds in treasury notes, at par, equal to the difference between the nominal value of the bonds deposited and the amount of bank currency issued on them. The Secretary of the Treasury is also required to give notice, by publication, to the holders of fifty-two bonds, that $20,000,000 of the same, to be designated by him, will be paid in Treasury notes at par. On the failure to present such bonds for payment within six weeks after notice, the interest of the same shall cease. It also provides that all taxes, duties and imports of every kind, payable to the United States, shall be receivable in gold, silver or treasury notes, at the option of the payer, and that upon the redemption of the public debt the Treasury notes shall be redeemed at par in coin. Morgan's idea is that by the adoption of this substitute three hundred and forty millions of the public debt will be paid and the currency increased two hundred million dollars.

Logan called up his resolution, as offered some time since, setting forth that the Cubans had established a de facto government and instructed the committee on foreign affairs to inquire why belligerent rights should not be accorded to the Republic of Cuba. Logan argued at length in favor of the resolution.

On motion of Wood, the President was asked by what authority Spanish vessels were to be repaired at the Boston navy yard. The House refused to suspend the rules, and on motion of Paine, adopted his resolution as to the mode of deciding contested election cases.

Wilson, of Minnesota, introduced a bill to reduce the number of officers of the navy.

The House in a committee of the whole took up the legislative appropriation bill, but rose after disposing of only two clauses and adjourned.
