DESERET EVENING NEWS

Saturday, October 11, 1908.

A TRAGEDY OF ERRORS.

It was after this, Bella, the "captain girl," brought her role. It was from her front, Edwina Jones, faintly Ned, who had come from afar to pay her a visit, and being tired, had decided to wait at the depot until she came to see her. There was no time to lose. Mrs. Jeffries gave a few directions to her cook, and hurried away.

Half an hour after she had gone Mr. Jeffries returned home and let himself in with his latch key, wondering that his wife did not come to meet him.

Mr. Jeffries had been a very jealous man before he married. He considered it his duty to see that his wife was not seen by any one but himself.

Mr. Jeffries had been a very jealous man before he married. He considered it his duty to see that his wife was not seen by any one but himself.

He put the pistol in his pocket, and then he went to the door. He looked out, and saw a young lady sitting on the steps. She was looking at her watch, and he saw that it was ten o'clock.

"What time is it?" he asked. "Ten o'clock," she replied. "What time is it?" he asked. "Ten o'clock," she replied.
