

THIS CLOCK KINDLES FIRES

An automatic fire kindler, the operation of which is regulated by an ordinary alarm clock, will doubtless appeal to every person whose duties include getting up early to start the fire in the kitchen stove.

With this new contrivance installed in a house it is necessary, upon retiring, simply to assemble the fuel in the stove or any fireplace, connect an attachment to the clock, and set the latter at any required hour. When the alarm sounds a fulminate is ignited, which, communicating with an inflammable substance in the stove, range, furnace or grate, immediately starts the fire. By the time the householder or servant is up the fire is burning briskly and the water is boiling.

It is claimed that these new devices may be so set that they will start fires whenever wanted, and thus have a home thoroughly heated before the occupants stir from their beds. From the back of the clock used in connection with the automatic fire kindler extends a shaft on which is mounted a rotary friction disk or pulley, the periphery of which is milled or otherwise designed to create friction when rotated in contact with a relatively stationary member. By the operation of a pivotal connection with the rotary disk, this entire external mechanism is set in motion when the alarm is released.

Instantly a fuse, with an easily ignited fulminate at its end and held in place in a slot opening against the friction wheel, is set afire. The flame, properly confined within the metallic slot, travels instantly over the fulminate strand, which is saturated with a free burning ingredient. The clock may be set on a nearby shelf or on the back of the stove or a furnace projection. As even a small and cheap alarm clock may be utilized and as the tube incased fire strand may be safely controlled, that part of the problem is very simple. Moreover, any kind of kindling substance ordinarily used may be utilized.

THE STUDENT'S VIEW OF THE CASE.

Once upon a time Prof. Wilson, of Edinburgh, wrote on the blackboard in his laboratory:

REASON FOR THE INVITATION.

Brannigan—Come home, an' teck supper wid me, Flannigan.
Flannigan—Shure, it's past yez supper-time now; yez wife'll be mad as a hatter.
Brannigan—That's jist it; she can't blick th' two iv us.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.
