An accident of a very serious nature was that which occurred Saturday evening on the line of the Union Pacific railway, at the intersection of Fourth West and Second North streets.

As the Ogden train was approaching the depot the fireman noticed a covered wagon coming along, but paid no special attention to it, thinking they would stop before reaching the track. As the train drew nearer he was horrified to see that they intended driving right across, whereupon he called to the engineer to stop, at the same time pulling the whistle, but, alas, it was too late, the engine struck the horses, throwing them into the air and killing them instantly, and the baggage car hit the wagon in which was seated three unfortunate.

The train was stopped as quickly as possible and the injured people extricated from the ruins, while Dr. Darby was immediately sent for, arriving upon the scene of the accident a few minutes later.

A hasty examination was made and the wounds dressed, after which they were placed upon a car and taken immediately to the Union Pacific hospital at Ogden.

The names of the injured people are, George Pyle and son, and Dr. E. G. Wright, alias Buena Vista, Colorado. They were en route to California in the hopes of seeking a new location for a home. George Pyle is a man about 60 years of age and is the owner of a very stable in Buena Vista. He was injured about the head, his neck and small of the back being affected. His son, aged 11 years, escaped with but a few bruises on the face and head.

Dr. Wright is 80 years of age and a practitioner of Buena Vista. His injuries are similar to Mr. Pyle's, being hurt about the head.

It was thought at first that the injuries of the two men would prove fatal, but later advices from Ogden say that they are getting along nicely and will in all probability recover.

The accident created considerable excitement, and the passengers on the train felt very indignant at the railway officials, for removing them to Ogden for treatment, when they were in such a precarious condition, and could have been treated here just as well.

No blame is attached to the railway company, except that the train was running at a greater speed than the law allows in the city limits.

Following is from our Lovan correspondent under date of July 15.

A mutual surprise occurred last Thursday, when Henry Mikkelsen and A. McKinney, parties of the first part, and 800 pounds of enraged cinnamon bear and a badly frightened dog, parties of the second part, came within ten or twelve feet of a collision on the top of the mountains in Lovan canyon, where Mill and Spring hollows, and Card, Millville and Providence canyons head. The boys were prospecting for timber, and while resting, one of their dogs found the bear, and also found that he had awakened the wrong passenger. When bruin attacked the dog, that animal ran directly to his master, and as neither man was armed, matters looked serious for a moment. One of the men shouted loudly, and the bear, who was as much surprised as they, without apologetic for his busy intrusion, turned and ran away.

The firemen were hastily summoned on Thursday evening to a fire on Second street, on the premises of Chas. Card, where a long shed, attached to a large barn, was on fire. Help was plentiful and the fire was confined to the shed. Earlier in the evening two boys who sleep in the barn saw a couple of tramps enter the shed, and they went to notify the police. During their absence the fire started and a fire hose attributed to the tramps, who have not been found.

Laminectomy is the proposed name for the operation performed on William Jardine, for the removal of the splintered portions of his spinal column by Drs. O. S. and O. C. Ormaby. Three sections of the vertebrae were found badly splintered, and the spinal cord severed. It is a terrible injury, but Mr. Jardine survived the operation and even seems to be improving. The severance of the spinal cord forbids all hope of the recovery of the use of his lower limbs, which have been paralyzed since the accident.

On Friday, a nine year old son of John Looall, of Providence, struck a horse with a stick and received a terrible kick on the forehead, immediately over the left eye, which cut a gash four inches in length and fractured the skull. He received prompt attendance and will recover.

The bridge over Cub river, on the road between Richmond and Lewiston, is in a bad condition. The plank-work is worn out and the protecting railing has gone from the elms. Last week two accidents occurred there. A horse feared to cross a hole in the bridge, and backed the hind wheels of the buggy over the side, throwing one of the lady occupants into the river. Fortunately she was more frightened than hurt. Two horses attached to a buggy, afterward backed a vehicle, with two occupants, over the side of the bridge, and the whole outfit, horses and all, fell into the stream, and were extricated with difficulty. Repairs have been ordered.

RETURNED ELDERS.

Elder A. Y. Duke, of Heber City, Wasatch county, has just returned from a mission to the Southern States, where he has been laboring for the past two years. He left this city on May 20, 1893, going first to Chicago, where he visited the World's Fair, and from there proceeded direct to Chattanooga. Upon arriving there he was assigned to labor in the Middle Tennessee conference, where he labored in twelve different counties. He reports very hospitable treatment from the people and says that they are beginning to realize where they stand and are paying greater attention to the Elders who preach to them from time to time. This is more especially the case in Nashville where the Elders have made many warm friends. Elder Duke was released on July 5th, and returns in good health.

The NEWS was favored with a call from Elders Herman E. Campbell, of this city, and Ephraim Jeppson, of Brigham City, who Sunday returned from a mission to the Indian Territory. Elder Campbell left his home on March 2, 1894, and on arriving in the mission field was assigned to labor among the Choctaws and Cherokees, which he did faithfully until released to return home. Elder Jeppson left his home in November, 1893, and has spent his time in laboring in the Cherokee nation. The Elders report great success in the Indian Territory, both among the whites and the Lamanites. Last year a great number of baptisms were recorded, but for the six months in this year, the number of baptisms as exceeded that of the previous year. The Elders return in good health, and feeling that they have been in the line of their duty.
