The University club cotillion was the event of the week and one of the most brilliant of the season. The rooms were striking in their decorations of red and black, the club colors, flowers, potted plants and flags; and the favors for the cotillion elicited murmurs of admiration throughout. These were mostly the work of Misses Aileen McClain, Edith Sadler and Marge Miller, and the favor tables were presided over by Mrs. J. E. Caine, Mrs. J. T. Harris, Mrs. Charles Post and Mrs. W. M. Forsyth. The favors consisted of red and gold butterflies and yellow chrysanthemums for the first set, and following Japanese fans and tiny whips with bells, sets of bells strung on ribbons, and tiny horns, hat pins and stick pins, hats and caps in red and black paper, red paper muffs with the monogram of the club in black, and cornucopia piped with the two colors, and Japanese parasols and cones tied with ribbons in red and black. Mr. Joseph E. Caine and Miss Katherine Williams led.

A COMBINATION OF LACE AND FUR.

The milliner, as well as the garment maker, leans strongly toward the combining of lace and fur. The hats of this character are, it is almost needless to say, of the very dressy type, and are such dainty delicate affairs that, were it not for the touch of fur, they might easily be taken for summer time creations. The upper brim of this medium shepherdess shape is of a white moire silk, to which is applied three rows of inch wide white Valenciennes, this same lace forming the entire underbrim and crown which is a little above the medium height. Around the crown is a band of chinchilla fur, at the joining of which on the right side is tucked a bunch of silk roses in faded pink tones, from which springs forward and somewhat across the front of the hat a huge white aigrette. A slight upward tilt to the back is given by the shallow bandeau covered with a rich of pale pink moire.
