A Case of West Virginia Chivalry

A case recently came up in the court of Mayor Fry, of this city, which has developed into a queer sensation and shows what sacrifices people will sometimes make, either from emotional or chivalric causes. Under the local ordinances, when a fine is imposed upon an offender, if the cash is not forthcoming the delinquent is put on the chain-gang to work out the same at cleaning the streets at the rate of $1 per day.

Yesterday a frail creature named Lillie Stanley was convicted of keeping a disorderly house and fined $20, which with the costs made her liable for $25 She was unable to pay, and appealed to the mayor to allow her to pay it in installments, offering to pay $8 down. The mayor said he was not authorized to accede to her request, and re-marked, half jocularly, that if she could find some one to either make up the money or work seventeen days on the gang he would accept the $5. Other-wise she would have to work out her

There was no immediate response, but finally a stalwart young fellow in the crowd of loungers said that he would never permit a woman, it mat-tered not how low and degraded she tered not now low and degraded she was, to be worked as a convict upon the public streets. He had not the money to pay her fine, but he said he had the will and the muscle to dis-charge it, consequently he would offer himself as a vicarions substitute.
