GLIDDEN DIVORCE CASE.

Mother of Maude Adams Sued by Her Hasband.

Some time ago Harvey K. Glidden filed in the district court of the western district of Wyoming a suit for divorce against Annie Asenath Adams Glidden, better known as the mother of Mauda Adams, the well known actress charging her with desertion. Mrs Glidden has filed an answer and cross-complaint, and the case will be heard at Evanston during the April term. She charges that after two years after their marriage, which occurred in Chicago in July, 1896, her husband ceased to provide for her, and degenerated into an habitual drunkard, subjecting her to such disgraceful indignities that she was compelled to leave him, and go back to the stage. She asks for the restoration of her former name-

Kiskadden Glidden, who is a graduate of Yale, and the owner of a large ranch in the Jackson's Hole country, was at one time a cattle buyer for Armour at a salary of $10,000 a year. The story of his wife's suit for a legal separation will still be fresh in the minds of "News" readers. Glidden has written to his Rycman, that he will file a reply to his wife's cross-complaint, in which he will deny that he neglected to support her and ave Army

Judge Made No Comment.

In rendering his decision against ex-Judge Alexander McMaster in the four cases in which the Salt Lake Brewing company, Hines Mercanthe commpany, Intermountain Milling company and J. G. McDonald were the defendants, Judge Morse made no com ment as to irregular practice, as er roneously reported in the "News" on Saturday. The judge simply decided in favor of the defendants, granting thirty days' stay of proceedings. If any error on the construction of law is discovered in the court's decisions an appeal will be taken. If, on the other hand, there is error on the facts the cases are not appealable.

SMUGGLED MORPHINE.

Unique Manner of Getting the Drug Inside State Prison.

Several weeks ago Justice Dana T. Smith issued a warrant for the arrest of one Mike Aaron on the charge of smuggling morphine into the state pris on. Since the warrant was placed in the hands of an officer every effort to apprehend the man has failed antihast Saturday night when officer Smith ran across him and landed him in the city jail. In addition to this he is charged with pedding fake jewelry and being a vagrant.

Arron hit upon a very cute plan for getting the drug into the prison. He saturated a towel with the liquid so-lution and when it dried, sent it into one of the prisoners. Upon examinaone of the prisoners. Upon examina-tion by a chemist it was found to contain morphine.
