

when a child and settled at Pottsville, Pennsylvania, where she was married in 1832. In 1842 she joined the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and with her husband, William Glover and three children, went to California in 1846 with the Samuel Brannon company in the ship Brooklyn, and came to Salt Lake in 1849. Since 1853 she has been a resident of Farmington and was the mother of 13 children, 60 grandchildren and 24 great grandchildren. She leaves 6 children, 47 grandchildren and 21 great grandchildren to mourn her departure. Sister Glover was a faithful Church member, a kind and affectionate mother and was held in high esteem by all who knew her, and mourn her departure from this life. We can say of her that she has fought the good fight, she has kept the faith, and a crown of glory awaits her in the great beyond.

THE PELICAN POINT MURDER CASE.

Monday morning the trial of Harry Hayes, indicted for killing his stepson, Albert Enstrom, alias Albert Hayer, commenced to the Fourth district court before Judge McCarty. The State is represented by A. D. Gash, prosecuting attorney for Utah county, and Thurman & Wedgewood; defendant's attorneys are J. W. Whitecotton and Chas. DeMolay.

Readers of the NEWS will remember the excitement that followed the discovery of the bodies of Albert Enstrom, Andrew Johnson and Alfred Nielson on the shores of Utah Lake, near Pelican Point, about a year ago. The body of Enstrom was found on the 12th of March, 1895; he had been shot twice with a rifle pistol, once on the right side and once on the left side of the breast, and had then been thrown into the lake and afterwards washed ashore. It was known that Nielson and Johnson, cousins of Enstrom, had been living with him in a cabin on the Hayes ranch at Pelican Point, and as they were also missing, a vigorous search was commenced by the officers and citizens of the county, and on the 23rd of March their bodies were found on the shores of the lake, some distance south of the place where Enstrom was found. Johnson had a bullet wound in the head, the ball having entered on the right side, back of the ear, and passed out on the left side. Nielson had been shot from the back, the bullet passing out between the eyes. The dead men were last seen alive about the 16th of February by one of the neighbors; a few days after that other neighbors noticed that the ranch was deserted and that the stock needed attention, and notified Mr. and Mrs. Hayes, who lived in Eureka, of the fact. They came to the ranch and placed a man in charge of it, and the idea that the missing men had gone off on a prospecting trip was expressed by Mr. and Mrs. Hayes. When the bodies were found suspicious at once pointed to Hayes, who had not been friendly with his stepson, but he was not arrested; the coroner's inquest lasted for several days and was conducted with closed doors. The officers worked faithfully on the clues that were furnished by the evidence given before the coroner and last fall the case was taken before the grand jury in session in this city; over forty witnesses were examined and over a month devoted to investigating the case. On the 4th of December, 1895, an indictment against Hayes, charging him with the murder of Enstrom, was returned and he was arrested, arraigned and pleaded not guilty, and has been imprisoned in the county jail awaiting trial since that time.

The officers have been at a great disadvantage in working up the case on account of the lapse of time between the murder and the discovery of the bodies, and have necessarily been very guarded in giving publicity to the results of their investigations, but it is rumored that some startling circumstances will be brought out during the trial.

A team and wagon have been missing from the Hayes ranch since the time the boys disappeared from the ranch, and the theory of the defense is that the boys were murdered by some transients, who took the team and wagon away with them. The officers have never believed this, but at first believed the horses and wagon had been sunk in Utah Lake at the same time the bodies were placed there, and spent a great many days dragging the lake in the hopes of finding them, but were unsuccessful. If the horses and wagon have been found the circumstances of their disappearance will throw great light on the case.

Hayes is a man about 45 years of age, of medium height, sharp features and steel blue eyes; he has a nervous and irritable temper and chafes under his imprisonment and the accusation brought against him. He speaks with quite a German accent, but claims to be of American birth.

The following jurors were Monday accepted in the case: B. F. Woodward, Joseph E. Wilkins, Spanish Fork; John S. Park, A. G. Johnson, Provo Bench; John D. Halladay, S. R. Cushing, Santaquin; Henson Walker Jr., Pleasant Grove; George Flulayson, George Montague and J. J. McClellan, Payson. This exhausted the panel and a special venire for ten jurors, returnable this morning, was issued. Two jurors, T. B. Parker of American Fork and Heber Allred of Lehi were excused for cause, having formed an opinion in the case. The State exercised three peremptory challenges and the defense five. An order was made to have seventeen witnesses for the defense subpoenaed at the expense of the State on the ground that defendant was unable to pay for their attendance, after he had testified that he owned no property.

NOTES.

Thirty thousand rabbits were killed in a rabbit drive at Fresno, Cal., on Saturday.

Captain William Steinhubler, a native of Hungary, aged 80 years, died at Sequel, Cal., Saturday. Deceased took a prominent part in the Hungarian revolution in 1848, and was one of the few surviving patriots.

Rhodes B. Randall, the La Grange, Cal., farmer who killed his son at his ranch on Friday and was taken to jail in Sonora, was found dead in his cell Saturday morning, having strangled himself during the absence of his guard for a few minutes. Randall was a raving maniac from the time he was placed in jail.

W. H. Tangerman, superintendent of the Hale and Norcross mines in Nevada, who was run out of the county by the miner's union, is in Reno, and declares his intention of returning to the mine if it costs him his life. Tangerman would have fought when being run out only he was disarmed and had 100 men against him, so got no chance.

Joseph Granucci, a three-year-old boy, was playing on the balcony on the fifth floor of a San Francisco building on Saturday, and fell over the railing. He struck a clothes line on the way down, which partially broke his fall, but came into contact with the ground with such force that many bones were broken and death resulted in two hours.

Kavana, the country home of Capt. W. B. Collier, on the border of Clear Lake, Cal., was burned Saturday night at 10 o'clock. The fire started from a lamp explosion in a child's room. The nurse had just left the room a few moments before, leaving a child alone in the room. The child, who was the youngest son, Jack, was burned to death. Mrs. Collier was seriously injured in an attempt to rescue her little son. The fire had obtained such headway that no one was able to enter the room to save the child.

From passengers on the steamer Al Ki, which arrived at Port Townsend, Wash., on Saturday, from Alaska, it was learned that the night before the Al Ki sailed the dead bodies of a squaw and her two half-breed children were found murdered in a cabin on Douglas Island. The white man who had for several years lived with the squaw, and who was the father of the children, is in the Yukon country, and had recently sent the squaw a large amount of gold dust. It is supposed the inmates of the cabin were first murdered, then robbed. The bodies had been mutilated with an ax. Douglas Island is across the bay two miles and a half from Juneau.
