

Utah Horticulture and a Story of How It Pays.

A STRIKING illustration of the possibilities of fruit growing in Utah is shown in the photograph of the desert valley of the Colorado River, about seven miles from the mouth of the Colorado River, where the desert is still in its primitive state. The valley is a wide, flat expanse of sand and gravel, with a few scattered shrubs and a few small trees. The Colorado River flows through the valley, and the desert is still in its primitive state. The valley is a wide, flat expanse of sand and gravel, with a few scattered shrubs and a few small trees. The Colorado River flows through the valley, and the desert is still in its primitive state.

VIEW OF THE MOUNTAIN COUNTRY AND THE GREAT SALT FLATS.

The view of the mountain country and the great salt flats is a striking illustration of the possibilities of fruit growing in Utah. The mountains are high and rugged, with snow-capped peaks. The salt flats are a wide, flat expanse of white, with a few scattered shrubs and a few small trees. The Colorado River flows through the valley, and the desert is still in its primitive state.

who will produce from 50 to 60 pounds of fruit annually, and the view of the valley is a striking illustration of the possibilities of fruit growing in Utah. The valley is a wide, flat expanse of sand and gravel, with a few scattered shrubs and a few small trees. The Colorado River flows through the valley, and the desert is still in its primitive state.

STATUS OF STRAWBERRY VALLEY IRRIGATION PROJECT

The Strawberry Valley Irrigation Project is a large-scale project to irrigate the Strawberry Valley. The project is being carried out by the Strawberry Valley Irrigation Company. The project is a large-scale project to irrigate the Strawberry Valley. The project is being carried out by the Strawberry Valley Irrigation Company.

Projected Strawberry Valley Reservoir

The projected Strawberry Valley Reservoir is a large-scale project to irrigate the Strawberry Valley. The project is being carried out by the Strawberry Valley Irrigation Company. The project is a large-scale project to irrigate the Strawberry Valley. The project is being carried out by the Strawberry Valley Irrigation Company.

Projected Strawberry Valley Reservoir

The projected Strawberry Valley Reservoir is a large-scale project to irrigate the Strawberry Valley. The project is being carried out by the Strawberry Valley Irrigation Company. The project is a large-scale project to irrigate the Strawberry Valley. The project is being carried out by the Strawberry Valley Irrigation Company.