JONES IS ACQUITTED.

That Is, the Directors of the Utah National Bank Express Their Confidence in Him.

THEY HAVE MADE A FULL INVESTIGATION

And Assert Their Belief and Confidence in His Innocence—Statement to That Effect Signed by Members of Board.

In order to make public their confidence in Cashier Jones, the directors of the Utah National bank have issued the following statement with reference to his alleged connection with the shooting of ex-President Stoutt of the same institution:

"There having been rumors to the effect that some of the stockholders of the Utah National bank were dissatisfied with the retention of Mr. A. H. Jones as its cashier, and the public press having announced that an effort was likely to be made to secure the dismissal of Mr. Jones from the service of the bank on account of the pending charge against him, the undersigned directors of the bank have made a full investigation of the whereabouts of Mr. Jones, and Mr. Jones himself has made a detailed statement of his movements and whereabouts at and for some time prior and subsequent to the time of the shooting of Mr. Stoutt, and his whereabouts have been corroborated by statements of other persons knowing the facts. After such an investigation, we are fully confirmed and deliberately assert our entire confidence and unqualified belief in his innocence, and with this conviction we feel it would be doing him manifest injustice as well as depriving the bank of valuable service to dismiss him.

NO PHOTOGRAPH AS YET.

Dr. Pinkerton has not yet brought into requisition the X-ray photographic process in order to discover the exact location of the bullet which sped its way into the body of Joseph M. Stoutt. As soon as the patient is in a condition which will admit of such an investigation it will in all likelihood be made, and the results of the photograph will be of great interest. But of more profound concern to the public will be the extraction of the ball, if it be found practicable, because by its identification a great deal of light will probably be thrown on the mystery. Mr. Stoutt is showing gratifying improvement daily.

LINEMAN'S PERIL.

Crossed Wires Cause a Flutter on East Temple This Morning.

At 10:30 this morning the linemen were peacefully performing their daily avocation of stringing wires at the intersection of First South and East Temple street. Two men were, like the proverbial little cherub, "perched up aloft" upon the respective poles, while another two were engaged in the peaceful pastime of holding up the traffic and tripping up unwary pedestrians generally with a dead wire. At 10:31 the scene changed. The dead wire came in contact with a [illegible] of trolley lines, and for fifty feet on either side, with a deafening noise like repeated rifle volleys, a splendid pyrotechnical display was in full blast. People came rushing along from all four points of the compass, and in his haste to arrive on the scene of action one venerable old gentleman hit the cinder sidewalk with a resounding [illegible] like [illegible] performing his early morning ablutions. The electrical display seemed to play all around the lineman who was apparently hanging by his eyelids from a cross piece thirty feet above the hard cruel pavement, and it seemed to the breathless onlookers that the man must relax his hold and fall with a sickening [illegible] below.

For a few brief seconds, that seemed like ages, the suspense was intense, then [illegible]. The [illegible] and crackling of the deadly current [illegible] the [illegible] lineman's [illegible] voice: "Why [illegible] the [illegible] don't you [illegible]" A pair of rubber gloves [illegible] the [illegible] and administered the necessary [illegible]. All hands experienced and resumed their peaceful avocations and the crowd [illegible] to [illegible] the store windows, [illegible] reference to the [illegible] "[illegible]"
