EVENING NEWS.

Saturday, July 8, 1876.

FOLLOW UP THE PLOW.

Hard times are now upon us,
And people are in debt;
The country's full of trouble,
And the worst is coming yet;
'Tis not without its causes,
And I'll plainly tell you now,
The only way to stop it
Is to follow up the plow.

Fill up your fields and prairies
With a crop that's good as gold,
And mine your hills and valleys wide
For iron, salt and coal.
The earth is the producer,
And we can tell you how
To make a princely fortune—
'Tis to follow up the plow.

There are too many people
Who from their duty shirk,
Who'd rather make a fortune
By other means than work.
The man who plants tobacco,
Corn, wheat or cotton now,
Is king among the "moneyed men;"
He follows up the plow.

The Girls A-Fishing.

WHAT NICE SPLENDID TIMES THEY HAVE.

There's generally about six of them in the bunch, with light dresses on, and they have three poles, with as many hooks and lines among them. As soon as they get to the river they look for a good place to get down on the rafts, and the most venturesome one sticks her boot-heel in the bank and makes two careful step-downs; then she suddenly finds herself at the bottom with both hands in the water, and a feeling that everybody in the wide world is loooking at her, and she never tells any one how she got these. The other girls, profiting by her example, turn round and go down the bank on their hands and toes, backward.

Then they scamper over the rafts until they find a shallow place where they can see the fish and shout:

"Oh! I see one."
"Where?"
"There."
"Oh! my, so he is."
"Let's catch him."
"Who's got the bait?"
"You lazy thing, you're sitting on my pole."
"Show me the wretch that stole my worm."

All these exclamations are gotten off in a tone that sends every fish within three acres square into galloping hysterics. Then the girls, by superhuman exertions, manage to get a worm on the hook, and "throw in" with the splash like the launching of a wash tub, and await the result. When a silver fin comes along and nibbles the bait they pull up with a jerk that, had an unfortunate fish weighing less than fifteen pounds been on the hook, it would have landed in the neighborhood of three or four miles out in the country. After a while a feeble minded sunfish contrives to get fastened on the hook of a timid woman, and she gives vent to her tongue:

"Oh! something's got my hook!"
"Pull up, you little idiot!" shout five excited voices, as their poles and hooks are dropped and they rush to the rescue. The girl with the bite gives a spasmodic jerk, which sends the unfortunate sunny into the air the full length of forty feet of line, and he comes down on the nearest curly head with a damp flop that sets the girl to clawing as though there were bumblebees in her hair!

"Oh! take it away. Ugh, the nasty thing!"

Then they hold up their skirts and gather about that fish as it skips over the logs, one all the time holding the line in both hands, with her foot on the pole as though she had an evil dispossed goat at the other end. They talk over it.

"How ever will he get off?"
"Ain't it pretty?"
"Wonder if it ain't dry?"
"Poor little thing; let's put it back?"
"How will we get the hook from it?"
"Pick it up," says a girl who backs rapidly out of the circle.
"Good gracious, I'm afraid of it. There, it's opening it's mouth at me."

Just then the sunny wriggles off the hook and disappears between two logs into the water, and the girls try for another bite.

But the sun comes down and fries the backs of their necks, and they get three headaches in the party, and they all get cross and scold at the fish like so many magpies. If an unwary chub dares to show himself in the water they poke at him with their poles, much to his disgust. Finally they get mad all over, and throw their poles away, hunt up the lunch basket, climb up into the woods, where they sit around on the grass and caterpillars, and eat enough of dried beef and rusk and hard-boiled eggs to give a woodhorse the nightmare; after which they compare notes about their beaux until sundown, when they go home and plant envy in the hearts of all their muslin delaine friends by telling them what "just a splendid time" they had. — Burlington (Iowa) Hawkeye.
