and China to the effect that the latter will maintain a sufficient number of troops within its borders to prevent Japanese invasion there. It had been previously reported and believed that Japan designed to extend a sovereignty over Korea, but the fact that the Chinese troops were not interfered with, shows the lack of the present. Added to this is the attitude of the United States and Great Britain, which will have the effect to restrain any further action of the Japanese may have for precipitating the war.

It is not to be supposed, however, that the United States will not, in the event of a military, maintain its position in the Pacific. It is not to be supposed that the United States will not, in the event of a military, maintain its position in the Pacific.
