

SPECIAL TO THE DESERET NEWS.

By Telegraph.

GENERAL.

BALTIMORE, 10.—The opening scene on the vote for the presidency by Alabama, was as follows: The chairman of the delegation, from Alabama cast her 20 votes for Greeley, this being the first vote cast. The name of Horace Greeley called forth a tremendous burst of applause, the entire audience rising and waving their hats and handkerchiefs, the ladies in the galleries and boxes joining in the demonstration. After several minutes of excitement had closed, three rousing cheers were given for Greeley, and when the result of the vote was announced the cheering was renewed.

NEW YORK, 10.—Greeley was much pleased last evening with the proceedings at Baltimore.

The Standard was suspended temporarily to-day.

The National Democratic Convention re-assembled at 10 a.m. Barr of Connecticut announced that the committee on resolutions were ready to report. The report was read, and recommended the adoption of the resolutions already adopted by the liberal Republican convention at Cincinnati. It was received with cheers. In order that there should be no misapprehension as to these resolutions, Barr called for their reading in full to the convention, which was done, each plank in the platform being received with applause. The one-term plank was especially well received, and at the close of the reading the convention gave three cheers. Barr explained that the platform was adopted in committee by all the States except Delaware, Mississippi, Georgia and Oregon. He moved the adoption of the report, and on that being adopted moved the previous question. Bayard, of Delaware, inquired whether the "previous question," another name for a gag law, had become the law of the Democratic Convention without notice to the delegates? The chair said the convention had adopted the rules of the House of Representatives, so the motion of Barr was in order, and the report was not open to debate. Various gentlemen appealed for the withdrawal of the motion in order to allow a short debate. Barr said he felt compelled to decline, when confusion ensued mingled with calls of "question," "debate," &c. On a motion to sustain the previous question, a call of the States was ordered, which resulted in yeas 553, nays 176. The chair announced that Barr was entitled to one hour to debate on the resolutions, and that Bayard of Del. had appealed for ten minutes time. Barr accepted the request, and Bayard proceeded to address the convention. He said that while there was no disposition to carp at or oppose men because of their former politics, he hoped the great Democratic organization would be allowed to have an independent expression of its own honest sentiments. ("Cheers.") Why take the cut and dried resolutions of any other organization? He denounced the attempt to force upon the convention the opinions of others not chosen by the Democrats. At the expiration of ten minutes there were loud calls of "time," "time," when the chairman announced that Barr had consented for Bayard to have 10 minutes more. Objections were made and there was some confusion, and hisses and applause followed. The chair called on the delegates for order, and Bayard finally resumed for some expression of opinion upon the question of the exercise of federal military power under the color of legislation, to enforce the 14th and 15th constitutional amendments. If the convention failed in this, it would be a serious disappointment. In conclusion he protested against the adoption of the report as a whole, and asked a separate vote on several of the propositions. Pending the decision of the question, O'Connor regretted any difference of opinion, and said that all other issues should be merged in the one of defeating the re-election of the present administration; the reconstruction acts and the 13th, 14th and 15th constitutional amendments had been accepted, public opinion was higher than governments, and superior to any declarations of conventions. There was nothing left as issue now, but to save the nation from destruction by corruption. As to the 15th amendment, he would be the last man to attempt to wrest from four millions of freedmen the right of suffrage. (Great applause.) Judge Reager, of Texas, appealed for union upon the Cincinnati platform with all honest opponents of the administration.

Barksdale of Mississippi, wanted a division of the vote on separate resolutions, but loud objections were made.

McRae, of Tennessee, assumed the floor and proceeded to protest excitedly against cutting off debate, but was cried down, and the roll was called on the question of the adoption of the platform, resulting in yeas 662, nays 70. When Delaware voted no, there were loud hisses. The chair appealed to the convention to treat with respect the votes of any and every State.

Before the vote was announced, Shortee, of Alabama, on leave, said that the resolutions contained some statements which some of his delegation could not endorse without explanation. He therefore changed the vote of Alabama from 12 yeas and 8 noes to 20 yeas. (Cheers.)

Hoffman, of New York, presented a petition of 15,000 Germans of New York, which was read by the secretary. It recommends the nomination of Greeley and Brown, expresses the belief that they will receive the hearty support of the Germans regardless of past party affiliations, as the best nomination that can be made.

Greeley and Brown were nominated on the first ballot unanimously.

Additional.—On motion the roll call of States for the vote for President and Vice-President was carried.

Snowhook, of Illinois, nominated Horace Greeley as Democratic candidate for President. (Enthusiastic cheering.)

The roll was called on the presidential nomination, and the first ballot resulted in Greeley 686, Jas. Bayard 15, J. S. Black 21, Groesbeck 2. Greeley's nomination was then made unanimous. Each vote for Greeley was received with cheers, and when Hoffman announced the vote of New York three cheers were given, and when the confusion subsided Hoffman said he would say, despite Missouri's promise to give Greeley the largest majority, New York's majority would be larger than Missouri's total vote. He expressed regret that there should have been any division of the vote. The convention knew those who opposed Greeley were conscientious, but he appealed to them to forget prejudice and personal preferences.

The motion to make the nomination of Greeley unanimous, was made by Wallace, of Pennsylvania, amid wild cheers and playing of bands.

Of the 15 votes 9 went to Bayard on formal ballot 7 were given from New Jersey, and 6 from Delaware. Pennsylvania gave Black 21. West Virginia gave Groesbeck 2. Georgia cast 1, and Pennsylvania 2. Blank vote.

The roll was then called for the nomination of Vice-President, resulting in Brown 623, Stevenson of Kentucky 6, blank 13.

On motion of Chalmers of Mississippi, the nomination was made unanimous.

A resolution for the appointment of a committee of one from each State headed by the president of the convention, to notify the candidates of their nomination was agreed to.

A resolution was also adopted that the convention upon adjournment escort the New York and Missouri delegates to their headquarters.

A resolution was adopted leaving the place of the next convention to be decided by the national committee.

The usual resolutions of thanks were adopted and the convention at 1.30 p.m. adjourned sine die.

The London Times says the nomination of Greeley by the Democracy is a flagrant instance of party demoralization. The Democrats swallowed their opponents' platform and candidates, confessing that they had none of their own. Nobody believes Greeley could be President four months without making some terrible mistake. We cannot believe he will be elected.

The News says his nomination at Baltimore on the first ballot at Cincinnati, on the 6th shows the Democrats more enthusiastic in his support than the Liberal Republicans; his election however, will not change the relations of England with America.

The News this morning says, "Honestly and frankly we declare our opinion that in the action of the Baltimore convention yesterday is the remedy for every public trouble, beginning a new era in unity of thought and purpose for these thirty millions of people. At Baltimore the divisions which provoked secession were established and it is fitting that the same city should witness the clapping of hands which marks an end of hates and fears of war."

The Courier says the enthusiasm for Greeley come first from the South and at the South he will receive support, earnest and enthusiastic, as well as among his warmest friends in the north.

NEW YORK, 12.—A Washington special said Senator Sumner used the following language to the Democratic delegation from Texas, who called upon him yesterday to ask his aid in the campaign—

"I have a very high opinion of Greeley. I know his labors in behalf of the same cause to which I have devoted my life. Of course I sympathize with the movement, but the time has not come for me to speak out. It may come, however. At present no man is authorized to speak for me."

Greeley will be notified of his nomination by the Baltimore Convention at the Lincoln club to-day.

The eight hour league executive committee assent to allowing men to remain at work 10 hours, where they now do so, and let those under the eight hour system try to maintain it. The committee want to be maintained throughout the summer in making propositions for next year, as all hopes of the eight hour system becoming general are now abandoned.

CHARLESTON, S. C., 10.—Trustworthy accounts have been received of the first and second broods of cotton caterpillars along the coast. They are thinly scattered along the fields three weeks earlier than their appearance in 1868, when they were so destructive.

NEW HAVEN.—Graz Brown was serenaded last night and made a short speech. He eulogized the action of the Baltimore convention as one of the greatest acts of patriotism and self abnegation ever witnessed in this country. He contrasted the Baltimore and Philadelphia conventions and said the latter was controlled by subservient tools, who refused to listen to appeals from the most distinguished men in the Republican party, to nominate a man who would unite the party, but persisted, in the face of all protests, upon their nomination. (Cries of "good, good," and mingled applause and hisses.) He declared that he honestly believed that Greeley was the ablest man in America, a great statesman and an honest and brave advocate of reform. He said, however, if he be nominated on the distinctive issue of protection he would not have supported him. He predicted the overwhelming triumph of the liberal ticket, saying he would not be surprised if Grant didn't carry three states.

NEW YORK, 12.—The speech of Doolittle to-day, notifying Greeley of the Baltimore nomination, was quite brief and formal, after which he introduced the members of the committee individually. Greeley spoke as follows:

"I should need time were I to attempt to reply fitly and fully to this important, and I need not say gratifying, communication. It may be that I should reply in writing, but as I have addressed a letter, which has been pretty widely considered, to the Liberal Republican Convention, it may not be necessary. I can only say now, that I accept your nomination, accept it in the same spirit in which it was offered. (Cheers.) I am at present in a position which many doubtless regard as a proud one, but which is still an embarrassing one, because it involves temporary, and I trust only temporary, annoyance by the misconception of my motives on the part of some valued and life-long friends. I am confident time alone is necessary to vindicate my motives to all candid observers, and to convince all indeed of the disinterestedness and patriotism of the course I am pursuing, and intended to pursue long before I was assured of so much co-operation and sympathy. (Cheers.) The time will come, and I trust in God the opportunity too, when the world will see that you are no less Democrats because you have nominated me, and that I am no less a Republican because I accept your nomination." (Cheers.) Here Mr. Greeley's voice faltered with emotion; he recovered himself and continued: "I am not much in the habit of receiving nominations for the Presidency. (Great laughter.) I am consequently unable to reply as readily and fluently as others might. (Renewed laughter.) I can only say, I shall be happy to see you all, or at least as many of you as can come, at my humble farmer-home, where I shall be tomorrow, and where we shall be able to converse and confer more freely than here. If you will come I shall be happy to make you welcome to the best the farm affords (more laughter and cheers); and I so simply wish you farewell."

Later.—The illness of Graetz Brown was quite severe for a time, but was merely temporary, caused by eating cherries and exposure to the sun. He is rapidly recovering and has been visited by several friends. The Baltimore committee have postponed their visit.

At a dinner at Minister Bancroft's, Von Moltke and Sherman scarcely did more than exchange salutations. The meeting with Prince Frederick Charles was similar.
