BREVITIES.

Omaha is to have a street railroad.
Judy says an assigned will is a deed without a name.
A suds made from soft soap is good for watering house plants.
If you would pass for more than your value, say little. It is easier to look wise than to act wise.
If men believe they are superior to beasts, it is astonishing what trouble they take to prove the contrary.
Little daisy's mother was trying to explain to her the meaning of a smile. "Oh, yes," she said "it is the whisper of a laugh."
A man in Glasgow, Missouri, has constructed the model of a machine which reaps, threshes, cleans and sacks wheat at one operation.
Exciting competition in the paper collar trade in North Bridgewater, Mass., has carried the price down to one cent a box.
One of the papers contains the following advertisement: "Lost, a large black silk umbrella, belonging to a gentleman with a curiously carved ivory handle."
A man in Western New York has invented a machine for checking barrels of freight of any kind as they are rolled on or off the cars.
In the voyage of life we should imitate the ancient mariner, who, without losing sight of the earth, trusted to the heavenly signs for their guidance.
The music in the Boston churches, it is asserted, costs $50,000 per annum. One church pays its chief artist $2,500, and expends on the choir $6,000.
"Do you know what I am thinking about?" said a customer to a barber. "No, sir, not exactly; but I can see what is running in your head."
At a spiritual meeting, a short time since, the prophet Balaam was called upon and asked if there were any jackasses in his sphere. "No," he replied, indignantly, they are all on earth."
A German writer says a young girl is a fishing rod. The eyes are the hook, the smile the bait, the lover the gudgeon, and the marriage the butter in which he is fried.
"What is that puppy barking at?" asked a fox whose boots were polished more than his ideas.
"Why," said a bystander, "he sees another puppy in your boots."
An Irish peasant being asked why he permitted his pig to take up quarters with his family, made an answer as bounding with satirical naïveté: "Why not? Doesn't the place afford every convenience that a pig can require."
A cross old bachelor says "the reason why women do not cut themselves in two by tight lacing is because they lace around the heart, and that is so hard they cannot affect it."
"Patrick," said a priest to an Irishman, "how much hay did you steal?" "Well," replied Pat, "I may as well confess to yer reverence for the whole stack for my wife and I are going to take the rest of it on the first dark night."
"Wherever you find many men, you find many minds," exclaimed a public speaker.
"Taint so, by jingo," responded one of his auditors: "If you'd only ask this whole crowd out to take a drink, you'd find 'em all of one mind." The lecturer "caved" without trying the experiment.
It is a very indiscreet and troublesome ambition which cares so much about fame; about what the world says of us; to be always looking in the faces of others for approval; to be always anxious about the effect of what we do or say; to be always shouting, to hear the echoes of our own voices.
German red tape is illustrated by an instance in which the citizens of one town ran twelve miles to another town to some fire engines to put down a conflagration, and then were refused the engines until they went back and brought a written requisition.
A curious method of killing rats is recommended in a German journal as very efficient. A piece of new or unused sponge is cut into small pieces, which are smeared with butter and placed within reach of the rats, next to a dish of water. The rats eat the sponge, and becoming thirsty, drink the water, which swells the sponge, and in a short time kills the animals, which are found dead all around.
Teacher—"Come right up here, you young scamp, and get a spanking." Scholar—"A'n't got no right to spank me now; the copy you just sent me says so." Teacher—"I should like to hear you read that over to me." Scholar—"You shall." (He reads.) "Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's, and so forth, and when you're spanking me you ain't aiming at no such end."
"Child-mistresses" are the latest horrible developments of high life in Paris. It is fashionable now to keep mistresses such as delighted the infamous Louis XV., at the Parc Ceris. For instance, the little Garconiere, who, two years ago, played the violin at the Cafe de France, and was so generally admired for beauty, is now kept by the old Vicomte de Bay, at a house in the Rue d'Acajou. The poor little creature could not be more than ten years old when she played at the above named cafe. Other instances of the same description are mentioned. At the last meeting of the editors of the Paris opposition papers this subject was broached, and several journalists were in favor of publishing the names of the secondarily guilty of such infamies. But the majority thought the government would shield them, because some of them are members of the corps legislatif, and that the corrupt tribunals would condemn every journal bold enough to denounce these abominations.
